Four Killed and Three Injured in Tunnel Cave-In in Colorado

Victims Trapped 2,000 Feet From Mine Entrance

Loosening of Huge Boulder by Vibrations From Electric Drill Precipitates Disaster Near Leadville—Three Miners Manage to Extricate Selves From Debris and Secure Help

Rescue Crew Reaches Bodies Within Hour

(Associated Press)

LEADVILLE, Colo., June 7.—The loosening of a huge boulder by vibrations from an electric drill early today precipitated a cave-in in the extreme lower tunnel of the Climax molybdenum mine thirteen miles northeast of Leadville, which caused the death of four miners and injured three others.

The dead:

Louis Barton, thirty-five, Butte, Mont.
Sherman Frazier, twenty-seven, Leadville.

Ralph Fort, thirty-two, Denver.
Frederick McMahon, twenty-eight, Leadville.

Nick Baron, Archie Wilson and E. C. Parker, of Leadville, were seriously injured and were brought to a leadville hospital.

The cave-in occurred at 6 o'clock this morning as the night shift was about to quit work. The crew was laying the last charge of dynamite preparatory to the blasting when the huge rock came tumbling down on them. Several cave-ins have occurred in the lower tunnel in recent weeks, but none of them resulted in casualties.

The miners were trapped 2,000 feet from the entrance of the mine. Wilson, Parker and Baron managed to extricate themselves from the debris and struggle down the tunnel for help. Wilson suffered fractures of several ribs and finally collapsed. A rescue crew of 100 men went to the mine from Leadville and had reached the bodies within an hour. The dead were so mangled that the identity tags worn in the mine.

Propagandists Against Foreign Rule Stir Up Trouble for French Regime

GENERAL RISING IS ANTICIPATED

By CAMILLE LEMERCIER
(Copyright, 1930, by The Chicago Daily News Foreign Service)

PARIS, France, June 7.—Outrages and riots are now occurring daily in French Indo-China. The latest incidents have taken place in Phum Province in Cholon, where ten persons have been wounded, and in Gladinh, near Saigon, where two have been killed and seven wounded.

All these riots develop along the same plan. A column of 2,000 or 3,000 rioters marches on the quarters of the local native officials, waving red flags and shouting "Down with taxes! Down with the French tyrants! Down with traitors who support the foreign rule!"

Native officials exhort the crowd to maintain calm and try to prevent an advance, but the first ranks of the demonstrators, being pressed by those behind and unable to halt, the police open fire.

The continuity and nature of the riots clearly show that the natives obey general instructions of propagandists, who are hoping that repetition of the outrages will finally lead to a mass rebellion which the French, with their small police and military forces, will be unable to meet.

The Indo-Chinese unrest was the topic of yesterday's debate in the French Chamber of Deputies, and the Government will have an opportunity to give its long-awaited expression of policy.

Conference Frowns on Gambling

WINNIPEG, June 7.—Gambling was condemned as the Manitoba Conference of the United Church of Canada closed last night. The meeting approved a resolution stating that all methods of obtaining wealth without rendering equivalent service to the community are not compatible with Christianity. Gambling in stocks, grain and at race meets and agricultural fairs were criticized.

Raffles, whist drives and dances, as a means of raising money for church funds, were labeled as entirely out of harmony with the Christian spirit.

Should the venture be successful, they will be the first to make the crossing from France to the United States. The photographs here show: 1. Recent portrait of Mme. Dieudonne Coste, charming wife of Captain Coste, noted French aviator; 2. Capt. Dieudonne Coste, who heads the Paris-to-New York flight attempt, and, 3. Jean Belonte, well-known French flyer, who accompanies Coste in the flight.

New Features Introduced Into Summer School for Sessions to Begin July 7

THE Summer School for Teachers in the province will be held in this city this summer as in the past, commencing on July 7 and extending until August 8. The school will be under the direction of Mr. John Kyle, director of technical education for the province.

While the syllabus follows in large part the courses which have been found most useful to teachers in past years, there are in connection with this year's courses some new features which will make the Summer School a unique one.

FIVE WEEKS' COURSE
One of these is a five weeks' intensive Normal School course which will embrace in its scope outstanding studies. Under this course psychology will form the fundamental basis, and will be taught throughout the whole five weeks.

Soviet Government Fails to Prevent Use of Propaganda

(Copyright, 1930, by The Chicago Daily News Foreign Service)

LONDON, Eng., June 7.—Rt. Hon. Arthur Henderson, Foreign Secretary, in a cautious speech in the House of Commons last night regarding Soviet propaganda, admitted that the Soviet Government has not lived up to its promises made when diplomatic relations were resumed between the two countries.

He said the charges were being carefully investigated, and when the report was ready he would inform the House of the results, and ask if it would be necessary to break off relations.

SOVIETS BEHIND AFRIDIS?
Reports are coming from India indicating that the Soviet Government is doing its utmost to increase the present chaotic situation. A concentration of Soviet troops is reported north of Kashmir. The reason for the concentration has so far not been explained, but the attack by the Afridis at the Afghan gateway is believed to have been supplied the hillmen with arms and ammunition. British statesmen declare Moscow is endeavoring to injure the trade of capitalistic powers. The movement in China which was instigated eighteen months ago by the Soviets, did not make China Communist, but reduced substantially the British and American exports to that country. The Indian movement has seriously injured British manufacturers.

FURTHER AGITATION
There is a possibility—remote as it appears at the present moment—of an understanding between Mahatma Gandhi and the British Government creating a disturbance in other districts than those where passive resistance is in force, the Soviets aim, according to British observers, to annihilate the Mahatma's moral authority and continue the disturbances even if Gandhi decides to call off the campaign for non-payment of taxes.

Mill Near Fernie Destroyed by Fire; $80,000 Damage

FERNIE, June 7.—The sawmill and planing mill of the White Pine Lumber Company, Limited, at Dorr, forty-two miles south of here, were destroyed by fire shortly before noon today, according to a report telephoned to this city. The mill is one of 40,000 feet daily capacity, and the damage, including the planer, is roughly estimated at $80,000. The fire was reported still burning, but had not spread to the sawmill camp buildings, not the 3,000,000 feet of lumber piled in the millyard.

PRINCE WILL BE DECLARED KING TODAY

Kingdom Which He Renounced Five Years Ago to Be Given Back to Carol of Rumania

HIS RETURN MAKES POLITICS FEVERISH

BUCHAREST, Rumania, June 7.—The kingdom he renounced five years ago will be given back tomorrow to Carol of Rumania, who chose Mme. Magda Lupescu instead of royal right in 1925, and went into exile.

Tonight, following the resignation of Premier Iuliu Maniu and his Cabinet, the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate called a special session for tomorrow morning when they will place the dashing prince upon the throne that was his birthright.

Thus will occur a royal shift unique in the history of dynasties, and the boy king of Rumania, Carol's son, Michael, will become once more just a little nine-year-old fellow without cares other than

Police Raid Uncovers Jail Conspiracy

By ARTHUR BELL
(Copyright, 1930, by The Chicago Daily News Foreign Service)

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa, June 7.—It is now revealed that two prisoners in the Pretoria central jail, which was exposed as a nest of grafters and counterfeits of official papers by a recent police raid, are the Johannesburg financiers, MacLachlan and Bernstein, who are serving seven year terms for a $300,000 theft from the South African Reserve Bank.

Business as usual was their motto in jail, where they set up as bookmakers and handled big sums on the English Derby. It is believed that they are the brains behind the huge graft organization in the prison.

Sensational developments are expected as Major Celliers, new police chief of South Africa, believes that the whole police and prison organization is one great racket which he is determined to clean up. Immense quantities of Government stores have disappeared during the last six months.

B.C. Agricultural Data Shows Steady Growth in Some Important Sections

THE estimated value of agricultural production in British Columbia for the year 1929 is $62,632,890, as compared with $58,646,243 for the year previous, an increase of $3,986,647, or 6.76 per cent, according to the annual compilation made by Mr. G. H. Stewart, statistician of the Department of Agriculture.

The increased value of production may to some extent be attributed to the prevailing high prices during the year, yet in the volume of production increases are to be noted in the production of livestock, poultry products, dairy products, grains, honey, wool, hops and vegetables, other than potatoes. Decreases are recorded in the production of fruits, potatoes, fodder, tobacco and seeds. Imports of agricultural products from other provinces in Canada are valued at $16,185,368, as against $15,284,020 in 1928, while imports from foreign points increased from $4,980,081 to $5,557,702. The total value of all imports is therefore

WILD AFRIDIS ARE DRIVEN FROM CAVES BY AERIAL ATTACK

British Troops Search Area Southwest of Peshawar and Find Hill Warriors Have Withdrawn—Serious Riot Occurs in Gheanagat, Where Police Sub-Inspectors and Constables Are Injured

Britishers Seized by Border Raiders Obtain Their Release

(Associated Press)

BOMBAY, June 7.—British airplanes loaded with bombs, have driven from their caves the wild Afridi tribesmen who for a month have been menacing the strategic city of Peshawar on the northwestern frontier of India. Eighty airplanes have participated in the attacks and have dropped 5,000 bombs. British troops made a thorough search of the area southwest of Peshawar today and found the hill warriors had withdrawn.

Officials said the nature of the ground makes hiding easy and finding difficult, with the probability that some parties of tribesmen are lurking in other directions from the great city of the Northwest.

RELEASED BY RAIDERS

Europeans were cheered today by the news that two British officers and the wife of one of them had been released by raiders who carried them into Afghanistan, Wednesday. Those kidnapped were Major E. L. Parley, Captain J. C. Freer and Mrs. Freer. They were held across the border by Afghan tribesmen after being removed from their motor cars, but were treated considerably. Their release was obtained by a chief of the Indian side of the border.

News travels slowly in India and not until tonight was it learned that a serious riot occurred Thursday in Gheanagat, a village in the Daspur district of Midnapore. Two police subinspectors and four constables were attacked and injured by the villagers. One subinspector is reported since to have died and the other is missing. The constables were deprived of their ammunition and uniforms.

CAMPAIGN CONTINUES

Leaders of Bombay's civil disobedience offensive looked out through jail house bars today, but their followers continued the campaign undaunted. During the night a meeting was held to choose a new Nationalist war council instead of that discontinued by yesterday's numerous arrests.

The bottom was said to have dropped out of the local cotton market and cotton prices were stated to be petitioning the West India Cotton Association to set minimum rates.

The trial of members of the Garwah Rifles on charges of mutiny brought out evidence that their action had been induced by Subedar Jai Singh, commander of the platoon.

Bandit Snubs Depositor Who Is Generous

NEWARK, N.J., June 7.—Four robbers held up the Clinton Avenue branch of the Royal Bank National Bank here today and escaped with $15,000 in currency. Depositors and members of the staff were herded to a corner and remained there while the bandits rifled the teller's cage. There was no shooting.

As the bandits fled from the bank, Joseph Knader, a patron, offered them $45 which he intended depositing.

"We can't be bothered with small stuff," shouted one of the robbers.

French Channel Ports Feel No Disappointment

PARIS, June 7.—French Channel ports feel no disappointment whatever over the decision of the British Government against a tunnel under the English Channel. The ports of Calais, Boulogne, Havre, Dieppe and Cherbourg, much of whose economic welfare depends upon both passenger and freight traffic between England and France, have fought the project vigorously and today were reported well satisfied with the refusal of London to carry out the plan.

Attempted Murder Charge Is Laid

VANCOUVER, June 7.—Harry Laird, charged with the attempted murder of Mrs. Jack Layt, Eleventh Avenue, and Mr. J. R. McGregor, on Thursday night, appeared in police court today and was remanded to June 12.

It is alleged in the charge against Laird that he halted an automobile, driven by Mrs. Layt, and in which Mr. McGregor was a passenger, at Commercial Drive and Broadview, and with a revolver opened fire on the couple, slightly wounding the man.

ton, who was said to have endeavored to show his influence by inciting disobedience among his men. The ruffians pleaded guilty and asked for clemency.

In another court case, where a number were being tried for the bloody raid on the Clitagoong Arsenal some weeks ago, Chandra, son of one of those arrested, turned state's evidence and identified eight prisoners. Thirty others were subsequently released.

EARL OF JELICOE

LONDON, June 7.—An indirect plea that the Government stiffen its attitude towards the Indian campaign of civil disobedience and the disorders which have grown out of the movement, was voiced last night by the Earl of Jelicoe, head of the British naval forces in the early days of the war.

"There should be no weakening in the ruling hand of the Government. No empire ever succeeded in this world unless it was governed strongly and unless the ruling power exacted the proper respect."

"I do hope that we are not going to allow ourselves, in this British Empire, to be spoken to without respect."

REGISTERS PROTEST

A dispatch to The Daily Herald says Miss Ida Kinkinson, who was awarded the Kaisar-i-Hind Silver Medal in the King's Birthday honors for social work in Bombay, has refused it as a protest against the Indian Government's "policy of repression."

She also resigned from the Bombay Legislative Council, of which she was the first and only woman member.

PRINCE WILL BE DECLARED KING TODAY

some day he probably will succeed his father as king.

The dramatic return of Carol by plane made feverish a political situation that was troubled. Premier Manu presented the resignation of his cabinet this afternoon because the Government could not agree on the way of handling the new development. M. Mironescu, the Foreign Minister, thereupon was charged with forming a new ministry.

But Carol's friends—and he has many in Parliament—were busy, and their activity resulted in the call for the Sunday session which will make a king of an ordinary citizen.

A majority of the deputies clamored today for the proclamation of Carol as king, but it was found impossible to hold a sitting of Parliament tomorrow. He is strongly opposed by the Liberal party, but the army officers and people in general appear overwhelmingly in favor of his taking the throne of his father.

"WHY I RETURNED"

In an interview the prince indicated he returned because the political condition of his country demanded it.

"I have come to conciliate and calm the minds of the people," he said. "I have no thought of hate or vengeance; on the contrary, I have come to facilitate union in the interests of the country."

It was one of the most astonishing coups in history which dropped the elder son of Queen Marie back to the land from which, under the dethronement law, he was supposed to stay out for five more years.

He set out last night from Munich in a French airplane and was delayed somewhat by two forced landings en route, due to a shortage of gasoline. Eventually he reached the Rumanian military airfield at Klausenburg and donned the uniform of a Rumanian general before taking off on the flight to Bucharest, which he reached late at night.

DOWAGER QUEEN

MUNICH, Bavaria, June 7.—The Dowager Queen Marie of Rumania arrived here tonight and the press was told she would return to Bucharest, June 14, instead of remaining in Germany four weeks as planned.

This statement followed upon earlier information that her plans would not be altered by the return of her son Carol to bid for the Rumanian throne he renounced in 1925.

by surveyors. Complete topographical records of the areas concerned will be made.

One reason for starting the survey in the Vanderhoof area is that numbers of inquiries have been received recently regarding property in the district. There will be, under the terms of Government lands in the neighborhood of Vanderhoof, Prince George and other points in that district, and it is thought that settlers would be attracted if the reverted lands were thrown open.

It is planned to offer the Government lands at as attractive a price as possible. Terms will be liberal enough to place no greater burden on the settler than if he had purchased or homesteaded land instead of purchasing it.

TAUGHT BY SPECIALISTS

Another feature which has been introduced this year is the platoon system in demonstrating school work. Under this system every teacher who deals with the subjects will be a specialist in this particular line, instead of being a teacher of all subjects.

This is a system which has worked out with marked success in many places where it has been attempted. It really brings to the preparatory school something of the system which is adopted in the high schools of the country, where specialists in the various subjects teach that subject, giving the pupils the advantage which it is felt comes from special teaching. There will be, under this system, special rooms for the various subjects.

This branch of work will be demonstrated under the charge of Mr. Robert Straight, of Vancouver, a successful teacher there, who introduced this method into the schools of British Columbia some eight or ten years ago. He will be the principal of the demonstration school. The platoon type of school, it is stated, has been a success in practical work.

PLUMBING BY-LAW

The Plumbing By-Law, which received its third reading two weeks ago, will come up for its final passage tomorrow. It is possible, of course, that a motion for reconsideration may carry and further amendments be made. But it is not likely that such amendments would affect any of the main provisions of the by-law, these having been very fully discussed in council and approved by substantial majorities.

The main object of the by-law, passage of which is desired by the Provincial Health Department, is described, being to safeguard the public against defective plumbing more particularly plumbing for sanitary purposes. It seeks to attain this object by requiring, in all cases where such work is done, some person must be responsible for it whose competence has been passed upon by a board of examiners, and who holds a cer-

THE LATE MR. F. E. TRAUTMAN

The Canadian Pacific Railway Company has lost an efficient servant by the death of Mr. F. E. Trautman, who for the past twenty years has been the press representative of that transportation organization in Western Canada. Mr. Trautman possessed ideal qualifications for the post which he honored for so long. He was endowed with tact which he always exercised admirably. He had the faculty of inspiring confidence. He had a personality which immediately made friends. He was well informed on the matters with which he was called upon to deal. He had staunch admirers in all the newspaper offices in his territory, and by them all he was trusted in every sense.

In the newspaper offices of Western Canada his loss will be felt in a personal way. He did an excellent work through a long number of years in cementing and enhancing the popularity of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company in this part of the Dominion, and he did it all quietly, unobtrusively, but none the less thoroughly. He set a standard at which all the press representatives of transportation companies could aim with profit to the reputation of their employers. His death will be mourned among the host of those who were proud of his friendship.

ALL THE OLD THINGS LAST

While Lord Balfour, in the last weeks of his life, lay serenely awaiting the end which he knew to be near he sent a message to an old friend. The message was in these words: "All the old things last with me." They are remarkable words, by which Lord Balfour meant more than that his old friendship, his old affection, were unchanged and unchanging. His old belief in things lovely and of good report were all unaltered. His old confidence in the principles of honor and justice was unalterable. Old-fashioned though the belief might be, he still believed that God was in his Heaven and that all would be right with the world.

His was a great intellect, which grappled not merely with the transactions of worldly affairs and with the intricacies of worldly politics, but with the problems of thought and science. He was familiar with the scientific theories of the origin of matter, of the structure of the atom, and of the architecture of the Universe. Familiarity with all these never bred in him the assumption that knowledge had reached, or could ever reach, a stage where man could set himself apart from God. Who created him and all the boundless Universe of which he had knowledge. The old thing, the belief in God, lasted with him.

There were some words which he spoke to the British Association, when at the height of his intellectual powers, which illustrate very well what he thought and held: "Extend the boundaries of knowledge as you may," he said, "draw how you will the picture of the Universe, trace as you choose the evolution of the atom and of living things, until men arise, a learned handful, to explain all and everything—and yet there will always remain one thing you cannot explain, and that is knowledge. How did it come? It is not to be explained apart from God."

That is the foundation of belief. It is the unshakable one. In the hour of death, as in the fulness of life and in the height of intellectual power, the last of the great Victorians saw it and bore witness to it. May it be so with us; that all courage and honor and faith and hope may never perish from the Earth.

THE MATCH BOX

A clergyman has been writing to the papers of an alarming experience which has prompted an inquiry as to whether a fire he describes could have resulted from spontaneous combustion. As he sat at lunch in a warm room in which a bright fire burned a box of safety matches which he had in his coat pocket suddenly burst into flames. There need be no question as to whether spontaneous combustion was caused. It was.

Although householders may not be generally aware of the fact it is possible for matches to take fire without violence or friction if the atmosphere grows too warm. Furniture removers will not knowingly permit matches in their vans. Their reason is not that they fear a rubbing of the matches to ignite them, but because the travel of a loaded van illustrates a natural law, which is that motion can be translated into heat, and, in heat, untouched matches catch fire. Had he known it Prometheus need not have scaled Olympus to bring mankind fire from the altar of the gods; fire will light itself on earth under the right conditions.

Why does the farmer so carefully dry his hay before stacking it? Because if the grass is packed when damp it heats, gradually takes fire, and with the inlet of oxygen the stack is enveloped in flames. Half the stories we hear of arson in the countryside really have their explanation in stacks packed damp, and have nothing to do with the act of an unfriendly hand. One of the difficulties of the refuse dumps is that the addition of moisture to the rotting vegetation which they contain results in spontaneous combustion, and the water poured on to extinguish the fires serves as material to promote future fires.

Of course not all the heat engendered in this way comes to fire; for fire we must have mass and pressure as well as moisture. The brush turkey instinctively knows what Nature does with her heaps of decaying vegetation. These mound-builders, as the birds are called, make the mound from which they take their name by scratching up great heaps of rotting organic matter to make a sort of hot-bed. In that they lay their eggs, many birds together. If the heaps were made large enough and left sufficiently long they would be destroyed by fire; but although they grow so hot as to hatch the eggs and give the young young brush turkeys, the process of hatching does not occupy long enough for vegetable heat to rise to the degree of fire. Life not death, brush turkeys not poached eggs, is the issue of this gift of heat which never becomes a bonfire.

THE BANE OF DEATH DUTIES

The British Budget estimates that during the present fiscal year a sum of £80,000,000 will be collected from estate duties alone. Throughout the years there is a constantly growing increase in the amounts realized from death duties and all the time unemployment becomes more intensive. One reason why the unemployment problem grows more serious is because annually millions upon millions of pounds are taken from business reserves and active business channels in Great Britain for the revenue purposes of the Crown. That money is no longer active in industry and employing thousands of persons. In other words, it is divorced from its source, where, as Lord Tantalum says, "it was active and creative, and diverted to purposes that have no creative or productive side, with consequent stagnation, unemployment and doles."

Lord Tantalum, in criticizing death duties, asks: "Is it not really a blind and vicious circle—to drag vast sums of money from their natural place of use and employment, making people idle, and then needing more and more to give them because they are idle? This will always happen so long as capital is taken from industry to the extent prevailing in the modern method of taxation. Is not the growing unemployment in Germany today the direct result of the same cause?"

The Dunning Budget is a document facing both ways. It is devoted to free trade and to protection, and, because its efforts are compensatory in their aggregate, Mr. Dunning omitted to make an estimate of income and expenditure for the coming year. The truth is that, in every probability, the rival effects of the Budget will neutralize one another. In the matter of trade development it will be a case of "as you were," with the country continuing to experience an adverse balance. Mr. Dunning's fiscal actions and reactions favor of an acrobatic mentality—"Now by two-headed Janus, Nature hath framed strange fellows in her time."

From the standpoint of party politics Mr. Mackenzie King is to be congratulated on having failed to announce his Government's stand on the St. Lawrence waterway development prior to an appeal to the country. Had he advocated international control of this waterway, and made this an issue before the electorate, the Liberals would have stood but a slim chance of being returned to power. For the moment, therefore, pro-American policies remain in abeyance.

A NEGLECTED INVENTOR

The most cherished possession of the Weavers' Company is a picture showing William Lee, the inventor of the stocking loom, displaying his machine to a woman knitter. The picture bears the inscription, "In the year 1580 the ingenious William Lee, Master of Arts, St. John's College, Cambridge, devised this profitable art for stockings, but, being despised, went to France." The story goes that Lee invented the machine because he found that a young country girl, with whom he had fallen in love, paid more attention to her knitting than to him. Whether the invention pleased the dame or no does not seem to have been recorded, but Elizabeth and her successor both frowned upon it, and when Henry IV. visited Lee to France he accepted the offer and settled at Rouen. He died in Paris about 1610.—Peter Simple in The London Morning Post.

Clear Morning dreams of Twilight as he goes. And Twilight dreams of Morning in the dusk; Each, musing on the other, tends a rose. And leaves a message in its crimson husk.—M. Note and Comment

Oh! lucky Jim,
How I envy him!

Best paper credit, last and best supply!
That lends corruption lighter wings to fly.—Duns.

It is a lucky thing for newspaper commentators of either left or right degree that for a long time wise men were being born into the world and left behind them when they went to another world recorded aphorisms which will be quoted and commented upon by newspaper men and more fortunate individuals as long as the printed word shall endure. You know it is written, and you should know who wrote it, "that there is a tide in the affairs of men, which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune." It is also written that "there is no royal road to learning," implying that the road is stiff, steep, and hard to climb.

No one has said there is no royal road to wealth, for during the history of the world many royal hands have gathered great stores of wealth. But the seeds of democracy have been sown by political winds throughout the world and have produced rank growths in many unpeopled places, and kings and princes no longer have the opportunities they once had for gathering and storing riches. If there are no longer royal roads to wealth, there are many short cuts to wealth. There are many such short cuts in the United States, more of them than there are radio wave channels. There are a few of them in Canada, at least as many of them as there were radio wave lengths left when the United States had appropriated ninety of them and left the rest to Canada.

So this is the day of the common people, and a comparatively few of the people of the United States have appropriated a greater part of the current wealth of that country, and as many Americans believe, there is therefore no consolation for less fortunate people except in the thought that there is still a vast amount of potential wealth left uncollected and unappropriated. And if those who are comparatively poor prove lucky when they seek short cuts along the road to fortune, they may reap a rich harvest and say "let us eat, drink and be merry," and dismiss all thoughts of the poor house or old age pensions from their minds.

There are also short cuts to wealth in Canada, and there are a few lucky people in this country who know how to find them. If you buy a ticket in a racing sweepstakes you may be lucky and achieve independence almost in the twinkling of an eye. But it is not a sure and safe short cut to affluence, for along that route, while a few may be chosen, millions are left poorer than they were before. There is but one sure and safe short cut to wealth in Canada, and in order to find that you must have a genius for business organization and stock promotion. Lord Beaverbrook, who is now a political and Empire organizer, was gifted with that genius, and when he left Canada for a bigger sphere he left a disciple behind him who has proved that he was as apt a pupil as Beaverbrook was a wise master.

The reader of course has read about the Beathornia affair, or deal, or scandal, for that affair is the chief subject of discussion in the newspapers and on the streets. True, the Liberal newspapers are saying little about it, possibly on the principle that "the least said is soonest mended." If the Liberal politicians talk about it at all, they only talk in whispers. The financial genius who fell heir to the mantle of Lord Beaverbrook was the organizer of the Beathornia Company, and he did the job of organization upon such safe, sound and sure financial principles that it was not necessary for him to put as much money in it as would have bought a lottery ticket, and the reward of his services (chiefly interest giving politicians) was three and a half millions of dollars.

Thus the stock of the Beathornia water power company is situated with three and a half million dollars' worth of water to begin with and will be loaded with many millions of dollars representing the same fluid before it is finished with. It will make many people richer than the modest organizer who probably washed his hands of the whole affair because he considered three and a half millions would be sufficient for his modest requirements, and he has gone out of the country to spend his money and perhaps to be beyond the reach of inquisitive persons who might want to know something about the present and the ultimate source of the three and a half millions he picked up on the road with the short cut.

An organizer who had not been wisely coached by his tutor might have wanted more and might have got more by standing by the company he had established and set upon a sure road to prosperity. We are told that there is no man so rich that he does not lose for more. Our capable organizer is not that kind of a man. He has got enough, and he is content, which the consumers of the Beathornia Company may not be when they find out that they will have to pay about as much for power that never will be delivered as they will be asked to pay for power actually delivered.

The Rhyming Optimist

By Aline Michaels

HIGH TIDE
The voice of ocean roars, the crashing tide
Beats with a sudden fury on the strand,
And with a power that will not be denied
It sweeps in triumph on the crouching land.
The strongest swimmer breathes the waves in vain,
Less than a leaf teased on the tempest's breath,
Less than a feather on the hurricane.
Green heights, green depths about him shrink of death.

Yet, to the swimmer who has ventured out
And felt no terror, even in defeat,
Always there lingers in the high tide's shout
A sense of struggle which is strangely sweet.
It is a call to battle that he hears,
A challenge ever ringing in his ears.

Miss Elizabeth Anne Woods Dies in Sleep on Eighty-First Birthday

Another of the pioneers of Victoria passed away with the death of Miss Elizabeth Anne (Lillie) Woods.

The late Miss Woods had been in failing health for the past few months, and died peacefully in her sleep on her eighty-first birthday yesterday, at her residence in the Central Park Apartments.

She came to Victoria in 1861 with her father and mother, the late Richard and Anne Woods, residing with them at their old homestead at "Garbally" (now the site of the Cameron Lumber Company's plant). She leaves her brother, Edward, of Salmon Arm; two sisters, Mrs. H. K. Andrew, formerly of Victoria and now living with her daughter in Vancouver; Mrs. Tomlinson, Skeena River, B.C., and several nieces and nephews; also Mrs. Bentley, her cousin, a constant companion. She will be remembered by many for her great kindness of heart and hospitality to old and young, who were always welcome in her home.

The funeral service will be on Tuesday at 3:30 o'clock in St. John's Church.

MOVIE STUDIO SHOULD BE SUCCESS HERE

Mr. J. S. H. Matson Back From Hollywood After Studying Picture Industry

EXPERT TO COME TO TEST PICTURES

Just returned from Hollywood, where he has been investigating ways, methods, and costs of producing moving pictures, Mr. J. S. H. Matson expresses himself as satisfied that a modern two-stage rental studio would be quite successful if established here. But, although quite convinced of this, he is anxious to disabuse the public mind of any idea it may have that such a project is definitely launched. It is still, he emphasizes, merely under investigation, and he is now proceeding to look into the various angles of the undertaking in the light of the further information he gained while in California.

"I am personally satisfied that the project is feasible. But I do not want the people of Victoria to get the idea that the establishment here of the talking picture industry is a certainty. There are too many 'ifs' yet to be overcome, and a great deal of investigation has to be done. I have yet to report my plans to those financially strong enough to carry the burden and undertake the construction of the studio. Nevertheless I am confident that ultimate success is far from being a dream if we once get under way and make one or two attractive pictures," he reports.

Outstanding problems involved in the production of talking pictures in Victoria deal with scenery and climatic light conditions and the securing of skilled directors, said Mr. Matson. But all these things will be carefully reviewed by an expert.

CAMERA TESTS

Arrangements have been made for the visit here next week of Edwin Bowser Hesser, one of the five leading cameramen of Hollywood, who is to be taken on an extensive tour of Vancouver Island with a view to taking films that will demonstrate the wonderful scenic resources of this part of British Columbia. Mr. Hesser is connected with one of Victoria's well known collective farm movement and imposing taxation burdens on the poor peasants.

The result that the tonnage was considerably reduced over what was expected early in the season and the crop was late. The dry weather in the Coast sections also reduced the total tonnage of small fruits, while in the interior the shortage of irrigation water would have been more serious had it not been for timely fall rains.

On the whole, harvesting conditions for all kinds of fruits were very satisfactory. There was little or no rain during the cherry harvest, while other tree fruits, such as apples, pears, apricots, etc., were harvested under most satisfactory weather conditions.

In the small fruit sections the prices received for the five leading crops were higher than those of the previous year, returned goods and similar conditions prevailed on the whole insofar as the small fruit crops are concerned.

All tree fruits with the exception of cherries showed a decreased production. The total production of all fruits amounted to 180,220,000 pounds, valued at $5,953,497, compared with the 1928 production of 233,598,000 pounds, valued at $8,215,898, indicating a decrease of 22.85 per cent in quantity and 13.34 per cent in value.

The production of apples alone amounted to 147,604,000 pounds, being a decrease of 24.6 per cent. There was an increase of 14,167 lbs. in butter produced, the 1929 production amounting to 6,032,835 lbs.

The quantity of cheese manufactured was 39,452 lbs., this being 176 lbs. less than during the previous year.

The consumption of fresh milk amounted to 17,120,000 gallons, as compared with the 1928 consumption of 16,890,000 gallons.

Evaporated milk manufactured amounted to 254,461 cases, which was 22,475 cases more than in 1928. There was an increase of 4,479 gallons in the quantity of ice cream manufactured.

LIVESTOCK

The value of all domestic animals is valued at $54,535,101, representing an increased value of $2,540,744 over the year 1928.

There was a small increase in the number of horses over the previous year.

Beef and dairy cattle now number 416,446 as against 398,464 in 1928.

The sheep population increased by 35,277 during the year.

Poultry and eggs show a very gratifying increase. The numbers of poultry increased from 3,782,163 in 1928 to 3,970,620 in 1929.

GRAINS

Harvesting conditions for all grain crops were most satisfactory. Average yields, on the whole, were below those of the previous year, but prices showed an upward tendency.

The total area sown to grains was 175,267 acres, an increase of 21,766 acres, or 14.18 per cent over the year 1928.

Grain crops aggregating a total of 6,598,553 bushels, valued at $6,031,641, were produced as against a production of 5,592,883 bushels, valued at $4,656,088 in 1928.

Walker, lives here. He will visit some of the beautiful lakes, rivers and waterfalls and will be given an opportunity to take pictures of logging scenes and other industries characteristic of the Island.

The simplicity of the modern cameraman's equipment was exemplified by Mr. Matson while in the South. It was now possible, where outside settings were required, to transport the entire picture equipment on a truck which could be moved without difficulty to any point selected. This had the advantage that any scenery and tone could be registered on the spot.

As regards rentals of the studio to the producers, once it was built, it was said by Mr. Matson that there was not the slightest doubt regarding the possibilities of making contracts. Two concerns had already expressed a desire to negotiate for the rental of the plant for the production here of a number of short test films, the programmes under consideration involving in some instances as many as six to twelve pictures.

NOT OVERSANGUINE

"I do not wish to be oversanguine, but I believe that the inception of a modern, two-stage rental studio, fully equipped with the latest improved tone-producing unit, would be quite attractive," said Mr. Matson. This had been the experience in Hollywood and would soon be followed by the erection of other studios.

In Hollywood he was given generous assistance in his investigations. For inquiries had been freely extended by the leading studios, and full details of the cost of duplicating the Mack-Sennett studio had been proffered, together with information as to other model installations. Neither had it been difficult to secure details concerning the cost involved in the fitting of electrical apparatus and other motion picture machinery and the tabulation of earnings by rental studios.

While the whole undertaking is still at the hypothetical stage, it is stated that there will be no public financing required, the necessary funds for construction being under advisement privately.

The news item taken from a Southern paper and published here last week which stated that a picture portraying Indian life and scenery on Vancouver Island had been decided upon, is far from correct, the idea being conceived during a discussion with a friend in Hollywood, Mr. Matson stated.

SENT TO PRISON

KHARKOV, U.S.S.R., June 7.—Twenty-nine defendants, nearly all Government officials connected with the Agricultural Department, yesterday were sentenced to terms of from one year to ten years' imprisonment on charges of economic counter-revolution.

They were charged with favoring the kulaks, rich peasants, directing their influence and authority toward the kulaks, and imposing taxation burdens on the poor peasants.

FODDERS

The area sown to fodders was 327,804 acres, this being a decrease of 3,078 acres, or 3.34 per cent from the year previous.

The production of all fodders amounted to 686,584 tons, valued at $1,097,789, as against 807,346 tons valued at $1,029,954, produced in 1928.

Clover and timothy averaged 1.98 tons per acre, as compared with a yield of 2.25 tons in 1928.

DAIRY PRODUCTS

The increase in dairy production during 1929 over the year preceding was not large. At the opening of the season weather conditions were favorable enough, but cold weather in the Spring interfered greatly with the milk flow.

Later on early summer rains were lacking at many points of the Interior, though the Lower Mainland, Vancouver Island and Central B.C. fared very well. Summer rains continued with most beneficial crop results in the latter district, which is not, however, heavily engaged in dairying.

The rest of the province, quite uniformly, experienced dry, hot weather, long continued, which prevented a good milk yield in the Fall. The regular increase in production, however small, year by year without fail, speaks well for the suitability of the climate for the business of dairying.

The value of all dairy products was $13,135,114, being an increase of $200,658 over the year 1928. There was an increase of 14,167 lbs. in butter produced, the 1929 production amounting to 6,032,835 lbs.

The quantity of cheese manufactured was 39,452 lbs., this being 176 lbs. less than during the previous year.

The consumption of fresh milk amounted to 17,120,000 gallons, as compared with the 1928 consumption of 16,890,000 gallons.

The quantity of wood produced amounted to 1,162,668 lbs., exceeding the 1928 production by 182,150 lbs. The quantity of hops produced amounted to 1,444,600 lbs., representing an increase of 477,423 lbs., or 33.94 per cent.

There was a slight increase in the quantity of honey produced.

REGISTRATION OFFICES TO BE OPEN SHORTLY

Six Sections Will Be Available for Checking Over Work of Enumerators

ELECTORS SHOULD SEIZE OPPORTUNITY

The last opportunity will be afforded qualified voters to get on the list for the forthcoming Dominion election next Thursday, Friday and Saturday, when six registration offices will be opened in the city for the hearing of protests against names which may have been incorrectly placed there by the enumerators, for adding of names that have been omitted and for the correction of any errors which may have crept into the lists prepared by the 166 enumerators who carried out their work during the past week.

The enumerators finished their work last week in the eighty-three polling divisions, into which the city was divided, by Mr. H. E. A. Courtney, the returning officer. The enumerators traveled in pairs, being appointed by direction of the two candidates who contested the seat at the last election.

REGISTRATION OFFICES

These divisions have been grouped so that six registration offices selected by the returning officer will serve the purposes of hearing additional applications to go on the lists, and for the revision of the lists, as turned over by the enumerators.

These registration offices will open from 9 o'clock in the morning until 9 o'clock in the evening of Thursday, Friday and Saturday. They are located as follows:

No. 1, 224 Pemberton Building.
No. 2, 1007 Hillside Avenue.
No. 3, 1025 Cook Street.
No. 4, 935 Pembroke Street.
No. 5, Room A Campbell Building.
No. 6, 1871 Pandora Avenue.

While the enumeration of the registration offices means nothing to the elector in itself, the information is given that early this week there will be posted throughout the city in conspicuous places full information as to the bounds of the polling divisions, which will be looked after at each of these six registration offices.

NEED CAREFUL ATTENTION

The most careful attention should be given to these notices, so that electors duly qualified may have the opportunity, if they have not received a notice that their names were placed on the list, to attend and have their names recorded before it is too late. Any mistakes in the names as given in the notification can also be rectified on the three days when it is noted will be the last opportunity to be placed on the list.

BOY STRANDED WHILE AT PLAY

Comrades Thought He Was Only Pretending to Be Choking When Noose Tightened

At the corner's inquest held yesterday at the B.C. Funeral Parlors, the jury was told by witnesses of the tragic misfortune which befell Albert Blair, a fifteen-year-old boy, who was strangled to death before the eyes of playmates while they thought that he was "only pretending to be choking."

Albert's death was the verdict of the jury.

Evidence was given by two of the boy's comrades, James Stratton, fourteen, and James Drysdale, thirteen; also by Clarence Ferrie, who discovered Albert Blair's actual condition; by Dr. Bechtel, and by Chief of Police John Fyfe.

Mr. Ferrie related that, while going along Menzies Street, he heard one of the boys saying to another, "Blair is pretending he's hung." After going a little farther, he thought he had better go back and see if everything was all right.

When he did so, the boys also related that they saw Blair hanging from an inch or two and the rope had tightened around his neck while they thought that he was "only pretending to be choking."

James Stratton said that while he and James Drysdale had been playing with a rope in a vacant lot on Menzies Street, Albert had come across to them and, after a while, had put his head through a noose in it and pretended he was hanging himself. "We thought we'd go and

Natural Eyes

Every day brings proof of the wonderful success of the latest forward step in the science of optometry.

The new technique is a "back to nature" movement.

It develops the natural functions of the eyes by bringing visual co-ordination and comfort out of the neglected or overtaxed processes of vision.

Civilization is imposing unnatural stresses and imbalances, which require most accurate lens or muscle-innervational adjustments which the newer optometry alone can give satisfactorily.

We are exponents of the newer methods.

Dentist Says Jaws Will Get Smaller

NEW YORK, June 7.—People a few generations from now will have smaller jaws and a physical appearance markedly different from the normal of today if present dietary habits are adhered to, dentists at the opening day of the annual meeting of the Dental Society of New York State were told.

The modern tendency to indulge in such starchy foods as potatoes and white bread at the expense of vegetables and fresh fruits is "robbing" the human blood system of calcium and phosphorus, two vital chemicals in the development of teeth and the bones in the jaw. Dr. Franklin A. Squires, Westchester County district chairman of the dental society explained. About eighty per cent of the population today is suffering from some form of faulty development of jaws and teeth and the chief cause is faulty diet, he said.

Bernard Baruch, the financier, said at a wedding breakfast in New York:

"The old days when a woman had to ask her husband for every cent—so much for meat, so much for milk, so much to pay the gas bill—those old days, thank goodness, are gone forever. I suppose that today 999 husbands out of every thousand give their wives suitable allowances."

"I once knew a man who didn't believe in allowances for wives. I met him one morning just as he was leaving the house for business. Suddenly the door opened and his wife called:

"George! George!"

"Well, what's wanted?" he said, pretty sharply, as he halted and looked back.

"Leave me money for the roast, dear. Don't you remember the roast you ordered?"

"George took out his wallet. 'Money, money, money,' he growled. 'What a spender you are! When I'm dead I guess you'll have to be.'"

"Well, I'll be better off at that," she said, "than some poor women, who never had any practice!"

Edith—How do you like that Smith boy you just danced with?

Ethel—He might be all right if he ever learns to stand on his own feet.

SEEK SUPPLY

OF B.C. FISH

Desire Expressed by Delegation to Minister to Develop Trade to Japan

BIG OPPORTUNITY AWAITS SHIPMENTS

The possibilities of increased trade in fish supplies from this coast for use in Japan, and for re-export in turn from there to China, is the object in view of a delegation representing the Japanese Government, which yesterday interviewed Hon. S. L. Howe, Commissioner of Fisheries for the province. Included in the delegation is Mr. K. Abe, a member of the commercial and technical department of the Government of Japan, and Mr. C. Takahashi, who fourteen years ago visited this coast to conduct a study into its fishing possibilities.

SALT HERRING
In this connection the salt herring division of the trade between here and Japan is being looked into by these men. There is in Japan a large market for this class of fish product, the Japanese importers in turn shipping considerable quantities received to the Chinese consuming centres, where a ready sale is found for it. While here the possibilities of extensions along this line will be made.

PILCHARD FISHERY
The members of the delegation manifested a deep interest also in the pilchard industry. They were anxious to learn all they could in connection with the reduction works which are carried on here, manifesting an interest in ascertaining if there was in this undertaking the possibility that a good food fish was being sacrificed to the manufacture of oil and fish meal.

They are deeply interested in the fish trade from the Southern United States and Japan, and the mission includes in its itinerary visits to San Francisco and Los Angeles in this connection.

They will report upon the possibilities of extended trade in fish supplies for the future from this coast, as the Japanese people are large users of this article of food.

Mr. W. H. Blackie will address the British-Israel Association at the Gordon Block, Yates Street, on Tuesday, at 8 o'clock. He will tell of the proceedings at the convention at Winnipeg, where he was unanimously re-elected president of the Canadian British-Israel Federation for the third consecutive time.

Pre-Summer Weather Alters Poet's Opinion of Canada

MONTREAL, June 7.—The author of "Our Lady of the Snows," none other than Rudyard Kipling himself, in person, has just had a taste of Canadian pre-summer weather. Arriving in Montreal at the beginning of the week, he came just in time to smelter with the rest of the city beneath a rapidly rising temperature, which soon sent the thermometer soaring into the 90's. He is now returning to England on the Canadian Pacific liner Duchess of Bedford, with a vastly different opinion about Canada and Canada's weather. In commenting upon the heat, just before his departure, to Mr. H. M. McCallum, of the Canadian Pacific Steamships, Mr. Kipling laughingly remarked:

"I think that if I had remained in Montreal much longer I should have been obliged to retract my 'Lady of the Snows.'"

FLYERS MIGHT START HOP TO U.S. MONDAY

Capt. C. Kingsford-Smith Abandons Plan to Leave Today Owing to Weather Forecast

THREE TO ATTEMPT ATLANTIC FLIGHT

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, June 7.—Captain Charles Kingsford-Smith may start his flight to the United States early Monday morning and will decide definitely on the receipt of weather reports from London tomorrow.

The flight had been set to start at dawn tomorrow but weather reports from London dashed the hopes of the Australian air pioneer, who in 1928 crossed the Pacific in the Southern Cross, the same plane he intends to try to fly the Atlantic.

The weather forecast that blighted his hopes for tomorrow has for uncertain conditions over the Atlantic with a forty to fifty-mile west or southwest wind.

Upon its receipt, Captain Kingsford-Smith and his mates got into the Southern Cross and flew back to Baldonnel. There is no suitable quarters at the improvised Curragh camp from where the flight starts.

Kingsford-Smith previously had stated that waiting would be too wearing on his men and he wanted to get going quickly.

The westward crossing has been the last flight of several distinguished bird men. This attempt, the leader said, is a "do-or-die" affair. Only Baron Huenfeld, Captain Koehl and Major Fitzmaurice have negotiated it, barely getting across and coming down in the northern wilds in the airplane Bremen.

With the gallant Australian will be Mr. M. E. Van Dyke, as co-pilot; Captain J. P. Saul, a mariner, as navigator, and Mr. J. W. Stannage, as wireless operator.

SENTENCE SUSPENDED

Charged with forgery in the city police court yesterday, John Lanchick pleaded guilty, and Mr. John Clay, counsel for the accused, addressed the court, asking for leniency. Lanchick, as the evidence showed, had signed a cheque at the request of another person, evidently without realizing the nature of what he was doing, and had not profited or endeavored to obtain any profit from so doing. Magistrate George Jay, the prosecution counsel understood, had no objection to releasing Lanchick on suspended sentence, and Lanchick's employer gave him an excellent character and would continue him in his employment.

Magistrate George Jay agreed that the case was one in which suspended sentence would be justified. This, however, would be conditional on reporting once a month for twelve months.

Nancy Gill, convicted of a minor assault on Amy Hetherington, under partially extenuating circumstances, was also conditionally released on suspended sentence.

C.P.R. PRESS

WRITER DIES AT WINNIPEG

Mr. Fred E. Trautman Was First Railway Publicity Representative in West

WINNIPEG, Man., June 7.—Mr. Fred E. Trautman, sixty-six, for almost a score of years publicity representative of the Canadian Pacific Railway in the West, died today. He had been operated on several days ago as a result of a blood-poisoning condition, and failed to rally.

No funeral arrangements have yet been made.

Mr. Trautman, born in Pennsylvania, worked on newspapers in the Eastern United States and at Port William, Ont., before he came to Winnipeg, in 1912, as C.P.R. publicity man. In taking the position with the railway under Sir George Bury, he was the first railway publicity representative in the West.

His territory, which he operated since his appointment, extended from Winnipeg to the Pacific Coast, and included a portion of the Western United States. He was well-known in Winnipeg as a dog fancier, and had been a kennel club member for years. His last official duty was to accompany the New Zealand delegates of the Imperial Press Conference from the Coast to Toronto.

FOUNDER OF ORDER HERE

VERY REV. G. DALY, C.S.B., ORGANIZER OF SISTERS OF SERVICE, A VISITOR

Order, Established Eight Years Ago, Looks After Immigrants' Interest

Very Rev. G. Daly, C.S.B., founder of the Sisters of Service, one of the most interesting organizations established in recent years to deal with some of the problems arising in connection with immigration, has been a visitor in the city this week for the celebration attendant on the installation of the new Bishop of Victoria.

This new order, founded by Father Daly eight years ago, and of which he still remains the director and financial head, has its headquarters and training school in Toronto. It comprises about sixty sisters whose special care is the immigrant, particularly the unprotected girl. Special attention is given to those coming directly from the British Isles, and for their safeguarding, pending guarantees of some definite destination, hostels have been opened in Halifax, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Edmonton and Vancouver. This last, opened six months ago, is the most recently established, the home being at the corner of Eleventh and Pine Streets. The sisters also meet all transatlantic liners at the ports of Halifax, Montreal, Quebec and St. John and get in touch with the girl immigrants. After securing a statement concerning the girl's intended destination, the sisters immediately telegraph to the hotel in the city or town to which the girl is going and thus secure a measure of protection for the young immigrant at the time of her initiation into the new country.

Instances were cited by Father Daly to show how necessary such protection is for girl immigrants.

Guests Drop in for Afternoon Party

Mr. and Mrs. G. Norman Irwin entertained a number of aviation enthusiasts at their lovely estate, near Whitby, Ont., when the guests "dropped in," and helmet and parachute were the prevalent mode. Here are shown: 1, Airplanes of guests parked near the Irwin home; 2, Mrs. Earl Hand, wife of the president of the Toronto Flying Club, a guest; 3, Mrs. Norman Irwin, the hostess, and 4, Miss E. L. Raddy, Brantford, also a guest.

The new sense of liberty which they experienced in this country sometimes went to their heads and without some such guidance they were apt to go astray either through ignorance or thoughtlessness. In Montreal and Toronto alone the order is in touch with between eight and nine hundred girls. With a view to providing them with the steady influence of religion, the girls are invited to attend a spiritual retreat every year. A system of follow-up work is also part of the order's activities, and in addition to safeguarding the girls from undesirable associations, those who have gone astray are helped as far as possible.

IMMIGRANTS NEEDED
Contrary to the views of some other students of the question, Father Daly is convinced that Canada requires more immigration. He has touched on this in "Catholic Problems in Western Canada," published in 1920, although the book is principally engaged with the problem of immigration and its consequences for the country and the church. He based his conclusions and observations which he made during the several years that he was rector of the Catholic cathedral at Regina, when he came into intimate touch with thousands of immigrants and their needs and the results of lack of any organized effort at their Canadianization. The immigrant girl problem was one of the important questions demanding action. And assistance for the immigrant mother was another. To cope with one angle of the latter problem the order has established in several of the outlying districts of Western Canada small twenty-bed hospitals, which are doing particularly good work in handling maternity cases among the foreigners and home-steaders. At Vilna and Edson, in Alberta, similar hospitals are provided for miners, loggers and railroad men. At Edson the work has grown so rapidly that a new hospital is being built.

ANOTHER ANGLE
Another phase of the work is its teaching activities. From Edmonton as headquarters over two thousand children in remote homesteads far beyond the reach of any of the parish priests are being instructed in the catechism by mail. With the same idea in mind, sisters, traveling in twos, one a teacher, one a nurse, visit the remote homesteads. They find many where the children have had no spiritual training whatever, and where the services of a practical nurse and some simple teaching in rules of health and sanitation are both

Centenarian Not Anxious to Prolong Her "Useless" Life

COPENHAGEN, June 4—Old age is not an enviable lot, according to Miss Pauline Hjert, who has just died at the age of 105. "I do not live," she said shortly before her death. "I merely survive. I am sorry that the Spartan life I always pursued has condemned me to live on. I am of use to nobody, least of all to myself."

Miss Hjert lived nearly fifty years in Boston. She left Copenhagen in 1854 in a sailing ship and arrived in America after a six weeks' stormy voyage. One of her idiosyncrasies was a dislike of the radio. "When I listen I have an uneasy feeling of peeping through a keyhole," she said.

Visits Children
The Children's Aid Home, Pandora Avenue, was visited on Friday night by Mr. P. Merryfield, the Cornish wizard, assisted by his daughters, Frances and Lillian, who entertained the little inmates and others with his magic, which was greatly enjoyed. Before leaving Mr. Merryfield promised to come again in the near future.

An enjoyable evening was spent on Friday at the home of Mrs. J. Frampton, pastor of the United Spiritual Church, when a large number of friends paid her a surprise visit. Cards and music were enjoyed by the guests. During the evening Mr. John G. Muir, on behalf of the guests, presented Mrs. Frampton with several parcels, as a mark of esteem.

Enjoyable Garden Party Is Given

Admiral and Mrs. Story were the guests of honor at a delightful garden party held yesterday afternoon at the home of Mr. P. F. Curtis, president of the Navy League, and Mrs. Curtis, president of the Women's Auxiliary to the League. The pretty garden on Prospect Place made an ideal setting for the gathering, and the ship's band of H.M.S. Dauntless played musical selections during the afternoon. Tea was served under the trees on the lawn, and among those welcomed at the tea hour were His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor and Miss Mackenzie, accompanied by Mr. A. M. D. Fairbairn. The guests included members of the Navy League and Auxiliary, the Women's Auxiliary to the Sea Cadets and others interested in naval affairs. Those invited included Admiral and Mrs. Nugent, Captain H. R. Moore, D.S.O., R.N., Mrs. Moore, Miss Moore, and officers of H.M.S. Dauntless, Commander and Mrs. L. W. PROGRAMME FOR CONCERT UNUSUAL

Many Excellent Musical Items Arranged—Mrs. Phyllis Rochford to Take Part

The programme for the benefit concert to be given on June 16, at the Shrine Hall, is to be one of unusual interest. In addition to some of the leading musical soloists, there are a number of others who have expressed their willingness to take part in the concert. There will be a delightful reading, a very attractive song and dance number, a playlet and, best of all, Mrs. Phyllis Rochford is coming from Vancouver for the sole purpose of appearing at this benefit.

Mrs. Rochford will be remembered as Phyllis Davis, who, on many occasions delighted Victoria audiences, and she has many friends here to welcome the opportunity of seeing and hearing her once more. Owing to the interest displayed in the forthcoming benefit by a number of persons outside the purely musical circles, it was deemed best by the committee in charge not to announce the concert as being under the auspices of any particular person or organization. All the expenses, with the exception of a very small amount, which may be met at a later date by someone who is keenly interested, have been taken care of by a group of friends, and it will be a source of gratification to those who patronize the concert to know that the one to be benefited by the concert will receive the entire amount received from the sale of tickets.

The management of the stage, and the new effects in lighting and presentation of the programme, will be in the hands of experts who are very kindly giving their services. The staff of Fletcher Bros. has been good enough to take over the sale of tickets, in addition to those being sold by a committee appointed for that purpose. No complimentary tickets are being issued, as it is the desire of the committee to realize as much as possible for the one for whom the effort is being made. The concert will be given at the Shrine Hall, Monday, June 16, at 8:30 p.m.

Varied Activities of Women

Royal Oak W.A.

On Tuesday the Women's Auxiliary to St. Michael's, Royal Oak, held its June meeting at Cordova Bay, when Mrs. Gates was hostess at her home, "Zumeret." The members proceeded from there to the beach, where, comfortably seated on a large rock, the business session was held. Miss Oldfield read an interesting report of the Diocesan Board meeting, which was held at Quamichan in May. After a short discussion regarding the Autumn sale of work, Mrs. Comley suggested, in its stead, a chicken supper be held at the Community Hall on St. Michael's Eve, and later a tea with stall for home cooking and fancy articles. The suggestion carried. The Little Helpers, through the kindness of Miss Oldfield, will be entertained at tea at Norfolk Lodge, on Wednesday afternoon, from 3 to 5 o'clock. Any member of the W.A. caring to attend will be welcome. The meetings will resume in September.

A suggestion box in which members may place ideas for the betterment of the review or its meetings had proved a great success, many useful suggestions having in this way been received. At the close of the meeting refreshments were served by Mrs. Underwood, Mrs. F. Work, Mrs. Turner and Mrs. Smith.

WOMEN GIVEN VOICE IN CHURCH AFFAIRS

CINCINNATI, O., June 7.—Marked by an important constitutional change giving women a voice in the affairs of the Presbyterian Church, the one hundred and forty-second general assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A. was brought to a close.

A report regarded by theologians as an unusual document was adopted almost in toto, prevailing upon Presbyterian ministers to give instruction in sex and marriage problems to young people contemplating matrimony.

NEW QUARTERS FOR OAK BAY SCOUTS OPEN

His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor Officials at Ceremony at Old High School

APPRECIATION OF MOVEMENT URGED

"There are two million Scouts, who, by getting together and inculcating principles of peace, harmony, and mutual admiration, are today giving a wonderful example to their elders," said His Honor Lieutenant-Governor R. R. Bruce, in opening the new quarters of the Oak Bay Boy Scouts, St. Mary's troop and pack, which will, in future, be located in the large hall behind the old High School.

His Honor, who was accompanied by Miss Margaret Mackenzie, arrived on the grounds of the hall shortly after 3:30 o'clock, and was greeted with the general salute, which was followed by a march past of Scouts and Cubs.

Mr. P. R. Leighton, chairman of the troop and pack committee, said a few words of introduction, after which Reeve Hayward extended the welcome of the Oak Bay Council to the St. Mary's Troop, which, he reminded his hearers, was organized as long ago as the year 1915.

HIS HONOR SPEAKS
After officially opening the building, His Honor made a short address, in which he first congratulated Mr. P. R. Leighton upon his efforts on behalf of the troop.

"There is no greater service that the fathers and mothers of this country can render," said His Honor, "than to encourage their sons to join the Boy Scout movement. I believe that the fathers and mothers of the province are showing a growing appreciation of the value of the Scout movement."

"Remember that the success of this movement lies in the hands of each individual Scout. I wish you the best of good luck, and God speed to your new home."

PRESENTATIONS MADE

Miss D. G. Hillard, assistant district commissioner in charge of Oak Bay Cubs, was presented by His Honor with a handsome pair of hair brushes. His Honor handed to Reeve Hayward a seven-foot staff which had been carved from top to bottom by Patrol Leader Shaw, and Scout Joe Marshall presented Miss Margaret Mackenzie with a beautiful bouquet of flowers.

Among those present at the ceremony were Mayor and Mrs. Herbert Ancomb, Mrs. G. Phillips and Miss Leighton.

FOX BREEDERS SEEK CHANGE

DESIRE TO HAVE INDUSTRY TRANSFERRED TO DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

Breeders Wish Jurisdiction of Provincial Game Board to Be Ended

A delegation representing the fox breeders waited upon Hon. W. Atkinson yesterday forenoon for the purpose of urging upon him the advisability of having a transfer of the raising industry removed from the game branch of Government, and placed under the control of the Department of Agriculture. As was urged by the members of the delegation that the raising of foxes had passed from the trapping of these animals in the wild, and had become an industry where scientific breeding and rearing was required. The fox fur industry as far as the fox farms were concerned, were therefore, it was argued, something removed from the wild animal class.

The delegation included two of the local breeders, Messrs. Dack and Bell, who had with them two visitors interested in the breeding of foxes from outside the province. There were Mr. Snow, of Winnipeg, and Mr. Bell, of Princess Edward Island.

The matter was discussed at some length with the minister, who will give further consideration to the suggestion offered. The move on the part of the fox breeders is along the line of transferring this business to the departments of agriculture in the various provinces throughout the Dominion.

Dedicating Banner at Morning Service Today

Immediately following the recital of the Nicene Creed at the 11 o'clock service at Christ Church Cathedral this morning, a very beautiful banner, the gift of Mrs. F. J. Greenway, and the handwork of the Cathedral Church Embroidery Guild, will be dedicated.

This exquisite bit of stitchery represents "The Light of the World," and was designed by Mrs. Frank Hollison, who also designed the T.C.H. banner. The figure is copied from Holman Hunt's famous picture, with the exception that the right hand, instead of being in the act of knocking, is raised in the act of blessing. The face, hands and halo were worked by Mrs. Rodd, and show the finest imaginable needlework. The flesh tones are very delicate shades. Mrs. Ard worked the cope under Miss Ravenhill's supervision, and Miss Ravenhill worked the under-robe and the lantern. The jeweled effect of the cope is very striking, and the way in which the garments match the reflected light from the lantern is cleverly worked out. Round the feet spring green leaves, and a leafy pattern worked in oxidized silver on the background of pale blue shot brocade has the effect of throwing the figure forward in bold relief. The whole panel is superimposed on a banner of reseda green velvet, fringed round the edges and lined with a handsome piece of brocade, given by Mrs. Tyrwhitt Drake. The ironwork on which the banner is supported is the work of Mr. N. M. Simister.

A burning cigarette butt, thrown carelessly through the View Street gratings of the David Spencer, Ltd., store, is held responsible for the excitement caused last night at 8:30 o'clock when fire engines rushed to answer a call. On examination it was found that the burning cigarette had ignited some rubbish. Passersby noticed the smoke issuing from the grate, and notified the fire department.

Accused pleaded guilty to forcing entry into the home of Mr. David Reid, 225 Fifth Avenue, May 26, and escaping with a coat, suitcase and clothes valued at $83. That Williams was "the son of a clergyman and a member of an Old Country aristocracy, and that Marie belonged to one of the most prominent families in Canada," was the claim of the former in speaking of himself and Marie Williams.

"That is why I am imposing such a sentence; you should have known better," Magistrate Edmonds replied. The trio are awaiting sentence in Vancouver on similar charges, having been remanded in city police court there Thursday after pleading guilty.

Both men have long records, police state.

KEEN INTEREST TAKEN IN ANNUAL GATHERING HELD AT WILLOWS TRACK

Canmore House Wins Cup for Highest Number of Points—Other Winners Receive Awards

The annual sports day of St. Margaret's School, held yesterday at the Willows, attracted a large number of parents and interested friends, and the long programme was under the direction of Miss Bird, gymnastic and games mistress of the school. The jumping events were particularly noteworthy, the girls showing great agility both in the long and high jumps. The riding, too, reflected great credit upon their instructors, as well as on those taking part. Visitors were struck by the keen sense of sportsmanship among the contestants, and the girls worked hard for their respective "houses," the cheering being going on and on enthusiastically when Canmore House was announced winner of the house cup for obtaining the greatest number of points, numbering 84. The prizes were presented by Mr. Norman Yarrow, who with Doreen Parkhill as runner-up, the junior championship was won by June Freestone. Each winner was greeted with cheers and applause as she went forward to receive her prizes, and at the conclusion of the presentation, three cheers were given for Miss Bird, Mr. Yarrow, Mrs. Spurgin, the judges and starter.

The judges were Brigadier-General Austin, Major Spurgin and Mr. E. Stoneham, and Captain Dexter acted as starter. Miss Muriel Mallory was the popular winner of the senior championship, Margaret Watson being the runner-up; Peggy Templeton won the intermediate championship cup, with Doreen Parkhill as runner-up; the junior championship was won by June Freestone. Each winner was greeted with cheers and applause as she went forward to receive her prizes, and at the conclusion of the presentation, three cheers were given for Miss Bird, Mr. Yarrow, Mrs. Spurgin, the judges and starter.

SPORTS RESULTS

The opening number of the programme was a Swedish drill, followed by the intermediate 100 yards won by Peggy Templeton, with Doreen Parkhill second and Gladys Bayley third. Other results were as follows:

Long jump, intermediate—1, Peggy Templeton; 2, Doreen Parkhill; 3, Nancy Patterson.

Hitting the hockey ball, open—1, Frankie Oldham; 2, Helen Campbell; 3, Daphne Barber-Starkey.

The testimony brought out that Potts had lived a strange life recently.

Striking Picture Of Crucifixion at Royal Academy

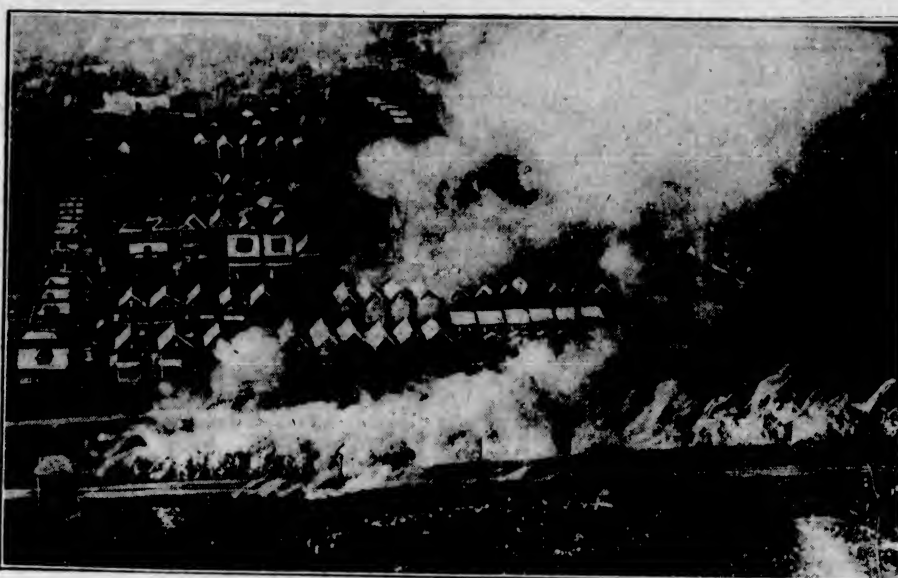

Buchmanism, a New Method of Personal Evangelism Tried Out in Edinburgh, Compared With That of Henry Drummond—Churches Give Chinese 30,000,000 Pages Yearly

Aviatrix Is Teacher In Methodist School

WHAT will likely be the most talked-of picture of the 700 freshly hung upon the walls of the Royal Academy, London, is an unusual delineation of the Crucifixion. As reproduced in The Guardian the tragedy is seen to be enacted before a varied crowd in modern dress. Cynics dressed in the height of fashion, sobbing women, coarse-faced thugs, flappers and their companions, panic-stricken people with averted eyes are some of the characters depicted in the crowded foreground.

The painter is Mary Symonds, whose attitude of humanity to the crucified Christ. In the background from the appeal of a Negro spiritual, is a saloon and also a lighted "Were You There When They Crucified My Lord?" The painting is apparently symbolic of the division present-day society that is marked by formal religion and indulgence and ignores the tragedy of the cross.

This Fire Cost a Quarter Million Dollars

THIS photograph, taken from the Hamilton mountain, shows one of the most spectacular fires in Hamilton's history, as the yard and plant of the Consumers' Lumber Company was destroyed in a $250,000 blaze. Three firemen were injured in a strenuous battle to save adjacent homes. Hose across tracks delayed trains. The entire Hamilton fire department turned out to fight the blaze, which at first threatened to sweep the residential section. The photograph shows the extent of the blaze, and in the background is seen a section of the houses threatened.

HELPING CHINESE

Thirty million pages of books, magazines and tracts was last year's output of the Christian Literature Society as its contribution to elevating reading for the Chinese. This press is a co-operative body, in which ten missionary boards combine, two of which are those of the United Church of Canada and the Presbyterian Church in Canada. Dr. Donald McGillivray, a well-known Canadian, is general secretary. Of the forty books issued last year may be mentioned Stanley Jones' "Christ of the Indian Road," P. P. Smith's "Life of Christ," Grim's "John Bunyan" and Jane Austen's "Sense and Sensibility." There are over twenty-five on the editorial staff, of whom more than one-half are Chinese. At the present time practically everything is issued in the new national language commonly known as Mandarin. It is recognized that the need of literature for the Chinese Christians themselves is very urgent, more especially in view of the forward steps being taken in the Five-Year Movement.

BUCHANANISM

Ten days of meetings held recently in Edinburgh under the direction of the Oxford group movement, also known as Buchmanism, has called fresh attention in Britain to this modern method of personal evangelism. Favorable reports follow the Edinburgh mission, in which the leaders, including Dr. Frank Buchman, who is the originator of the movement, came into touch with university students, met ministers daily, spoke at church gatherings and had a house party at Dunblane. Its origin was in a vivid religious experience about the beginning of the century of Dr. Buchman, then a Lutheran minister in America, who later conducted missions among American students and also in the Orient. In 1920 the evangelist came to England, where a striking work among Oxford and Cambridge students has been described by the late Harold Begbie in "Life Changes." Groups sprang up throughout England, Holland, Germany, and through the medium of some South African Rhodes scholars, in Africa.

Known by some of its members as a First Century Christian Fellowship and spoken of as a descendant of Wesley's Holy Club at Oxford, the aim is to find a way of abundant life which is hid with Christ in God. Its method is compared with the development of the principles of personal evangelism which were advocated by Henry Drummond. An observer said that the recent Edinburgh mission was "the greatest thing that has come to Edinburgh since the days of Henry Drummond." House parties are common. In the freedom and intimacy of such social gatherings there is much Christian testimony, one feature of which is confession of sin. Its members avoid publicity, in this respect in striking contrast with mass evangelism. A writer in The Scots Observer speaks of the movement as a challenge to the church in the emphasis laid upon a real religious experience. The movement is interdenominational and interracial. Dr. E. Stanley Jones is to start an ashram or retreat in India during the summer months, in which selected groups of Indians and Europeans in mutual consultation will think out means of working for India.

Miss Amy Johnson, the aviatrix, recipient of one of the King's Birthday honors, is a teacher in St. George's Wesleyan School, Hull.

Rabindranath Tagore has come to England to deliver the Hibbert lectures at Manchester College, Oxford.

Mr. C. T. Studd, one of the original Cambridge band, who pioneered in Central Africa, is reported to continue in good health, although now an old man.

Dr. Campbell Morgan, well-known preacher, begins work in October as professor of Biblical interpretation in Gordon College of Theology and Missions, at Boston.

LORNA MOON, FAMED BY AD-VERSITY, IS GONE TO THE FINISH

Ex-Winnipeg Beauty Expert Dies in Hollywood—Achieved Fame as Writer

(Special to The Colonist. Copyright, 1930)

WINNIPEG, June 7.—Few stories equal for dogged pluck and courage in the face of adversity that of Lorna Moon, Winnipeg beauty parlor employee, who died in Hollywood recently, having achieved international renown as an author and scenario writer.

In her last hours, this slim little woman, whose Titan locks were the envy of the superb beauties of Hollywood, insisted with a smile that "this thing of dying" was the greatest adventure of the thousands she had had in her colorful life.

Round her death bed were gathered dozens of disillusioned Hollywood aspirants—girls who had befriended in a thousand inconspicuous ways and who shed tears of genuine sorrow as they closed her eyes in death.

VICTIM OF PLAGUE

Consumption—the great white plague—claimed her. Her amazing courage was thrillingly illustrated in her last story, "Flat on My Back." It was literally true. Like Robert Louis Stevenson she wrote while slowly dying on a hospital cot at Albuquerque, N.M. Propped in her bed she wrote, her deft fingers and facile brain refusing to submit to the trammels of an ebbing mortality.

It was eminently fitting that her theme should be the triumph of mind over matter. Was she not, every breathless hour and minute, forcing herself by sheer power of will to work? Sentenced to death "within the week" two years before by grave-faced specialists, she yet laughed at impending fate and labored on.

Her story? Her rise from massess to the top rungs of her profession where competition is the keenest in the world? What of these? Lorna Moon was fifty-five years old when she died. She was born in Aberdeen, Scotland, privately educated and widely read. Married at sixteen in the land of her birth to a wealthy and titled gentleman, she was widowed within the year, following a fatal accident to her husband while fox hunting.

Without means, practically, she came to Winnipeg in 1903 and was employed in a local beauty parlor. Later she acquired it and proved indifferently successful as manager. About that time a shrewd editor of a Winnipeg newspaper was in difficulties. His "Beauty Services" were coming from syndicates which aimed to correct the inroads of the "average" climate of the United States. He had complaints from his patrons that his service was "phony."

HAD NEVER WRITTEN

So he set about correcting the situation. In his hunt his attention was attracted to the trim and active Lorna Moon. He invited her to write a weekly beauty column for his paper on "How to Keep Young." She demurred: "I never wrote in my life."

"Well, you know what to do, don't you? Just tell me the way you do it—in simple language. And there's $5 a week in it for you."

The cash rewards proved overwhelming. Lorna Moon started her beauty column, which scored instant success, going almost as written from the start. She had a gift of self-expression and rapidly polished

BUSINESS MAN'S GRATITUDE

Says Kruschen has kept him fit for sixteen years

RHEUMATISM BANISHED

Here is a business man who, having read letters in the papers from other people regarding Kruschen Salt, wants to know if anyone can beat his own experience. It is worth telling, so we give it here—just as he wrote it down.

In 1912 I had a severe attack of Rheumatic Fever. After six weeks my doctor and a specialist gave up hope of my recovery. A friend suggested Kruschen if I wanted to keep Rheumatism away in future. I bought my first bottle, and kept up the "little daily dose" until the second year of the War, when I thought my system was thoroughly rid of the acid. I stopped taking it. Within a fortnight I was almost double with Rheumatic pains again (showing that I needed to counteract the acid in my system). Back I flew to Kruschen, and from that day to this I never missed a dose first thing every morning. The result? Never the slightest twinge of rheumatic pain. Being a traveller I am out in all weathers, and I can claim to work hard and fast, and to retain my constant buoyant spirits, thanks to "my old friend Kruschen, who has, in very truth, 'kept me going' for 16 years."

If you wonder how Kruschen can achieve all that this enthusiastic user claims for it, you should first of all realize that Kruschen is a perfect blend of 6 natural mineral salts which we all need every day (1) to help liver and kidneys to perform their natural duties in a natural way; (2) to clear away gently but completely all the poisonous waste matter that has been clogging the system; (3) to purify the blood. The analysis is on the bottle. There are Sodium and Magnesium to stimulate the organs of elimination. To feed your tissues, there's the tonic Potassium. Each "little daily dose" is a full day's supply of these six vital salts; just the right amount to keep your body and mind tuned up to a pitch of real constant fitness.

Kruschen Salt is obtainable from stores at 45c and 75c per bottle, and is manufactured by F. Hoffmeyer & Co., Ltd., Mannheim, Germany (established 1760). Importers: McMillan & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

MAY COMPETE IN THE FUEL MARKET

Natural Gas Is Today Piped Hundreds of Miles to Industrial Districts

WASHINGTON, June 4.—A new competitor to the fuels that turn the wheels of North American industry is beginning to find its way to the doorsteps of the country's factories. It is natural gas. Five years ago a pipeline 100 miles long was considered an achievement. Today there are several 500 miles in length, and one spanning 900 miles from the gas fields of the Texas Panhandle to the teeming industrial district of Chicago is contemplated.

The discovery of new sources of supply for natural gas and new uses for it at a time when the necessary capital and engineering ability were available to build the lines are the reasons for the sudden development in delivering the fuel, says Mr. G. R. Hopkins, of the United States Bureau of Mines. He predicts continued expansion. Twenty-four states now produce natural gas in commercial quantities.

Ohio, West Virginia and Pennsylvania, where the fuel has been used by industry and householders for years, but the fields of potential development lie in the Southwest, where the fuel is taken out of the ground both as "dry gas" and as a by-product of oil wells. The Monroe field in Louisiana, where oil is not produced; the Texas Panhandle and the Lea, New Mexico, field, are three of the largest gas reserves. A pipeline from the Monroe field to Atlanta has been constructed at a cost of between $15,000,000 and $25,000,000.

The amount of gas recoverable in the Panhandle, Hopkins says, is estimated at between 4,000 and 8,000 billion cubic feet; in the Monroe field, 2,000 billion cubic feet. The Lea field is deemed capable of supplying El Paso and vicinity for thirty-five years. Natural gas consumed in 1928, including that piped to Canada and Mexico, was valued at $103,726,000 and totaled about 700 billion cubic feet. These are the last figures compiled. Hopkins sees natural gas competing with coal, coke, wood, manufactured gas, electricity and oil in the industrial field.

Too much oil in the crank case is almost as bad as too little. It causes carbon and fouls the spark plugs. Like a good many other things about a car, the quantity as well as the quality should be right.

Alberta Man Now Recommends Dodd's Kidney Pills

"Last winter I caught a bad cold and it settled on my kidneys," writes Mr. John H. Hilgen, Box 71, Kingsman, Alta. "I took two boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills and they sure did me good. My father is also a friend of your pills. He uses them often in a while when he has a sore back and they always help him. Last winter he had a very sore back and was in bed a whole week. We got him Dodd's Kidney Pills. The second day of taking them he was able to get up, and before they were finished he was all right again. He can do a lot of heavy work and never feels a sore back. Therefore we thank Dodd's Kidney Pills. If you, too, suffer, why not give them a trial?"

Life History of the Halibut Traced in Marine Movements

Halibut Commission Issues Report on Marketing Experiments—Effective Conservation Depends on Migratory Habits—Valuable Results Are Obtained to Guide Industry

Marking Experiments Bulletin Is Published

THE International Fisheries Commission, created by the Halibut Treaty between Canada and the United States to investigate the life-history of the halibut and the condition of the fishery off the West Coast of Canada and the United States, including Alaska, has just been issued an interesting report on its marketing experiments. The following brief digest of the report was given out by Mr. J. P. Babcock, Chairman of the Commission:

Commercial development of the Pacific halibut fishery dates from 1888, when rail communication opened eastern markets. The catch increased rapidly to fifty-three million pounds by 1910 and has since remained about that level. The maintenance of the total yield does not, however, indicate stability, because the catch has been made at the cost of rapid expansion of new grounds and increased efficiency in fishing. The industry has, indeed, survived as a major fishery only by constant development of the fleets and their methods. Its future depends on how it may be served by scientific and technical advanced measures. The story of the halibut fishery is, indeed, that of a constantly intensified and broadened strain on the supply. Under intense fishing the abundance on the banks has declined and as yet without cessation. Depletion of the supply is an accepted fact and conservation is universally desired, but how that is to be brought about is a serious question, deeply involved with economic and biological considerations.

CONSERVATION SYSTEM

The trade has advocated two principal measures: (1) a winter closed season and the other the closure of areas inhabited by small fish and popularly termed "nurseries." The former, based on the belief that winter spawning should not be hindered, has been embodied in the existing treaty; the latter has been repeatedly urged by the trade and recommended by the Commission.

The effectiveness of both of these measures depends upon the migratory habits of the halibut. The closed season restricts the activities of the fleet when it would otherwise be largely concentrated on the famous Yakutat spawning grounds, and protects the mature fish gathered there. But the question arises: To what fishing banks do these Yakutat fish resort in the open season? Are they confined to the banks upon which they spawned? Or do they migrate down the coast to the spawning grounds? In the extent of this migration lies the answer to the question as to the true value of the closure, whether the schools concerned are taken in quantity at no other time or whether their numbers are materially decreased upon other grounds. The proposed closed area for young fish presents a similar problem, similar and more direct.

OPERATION OF FLEET

The movement of the fish is of importance from another viewpoint, that of the fleet. The fleet is broken into sections, each interested in a different bank. Does one section make their catches from a different stock of fish than do the others, or from the same stock? Can the fleet be given diversified treatment in accord with its varied needs or must it be treated as a unit?

The experiments of the Commission to get light on these questions are embodied in the "Marketing Experiments Bulletin." In these experiments the fish tagged are caught by ordinary methods used in commercial fishing, only the untagged fish being tagged. The tags used were simple strips of monel metal bent over the edge of the cheek-bone of the fish. Each tag was numbered and when secured to the cheek-bone the fish was returned to the sea. A reward was offered for the return of the tag with information as to its place of recovery, and a larger reward offered for the return of the fish with the tag attached.

The marketing experiments were carefully distributed over the fishing areas so as to represent them fairly. The results are therefore applicable to the banks as a whole, rather than to any one area.

TAGGING RECORDS

In order to trace the sea movements of the halibut the commission in 1925 began tagging halibut in Hecate Strait, Dixon Entrance, and in the open sea off Queen Charlotte Islands and Southeastern Alaska. During that year 3,339 fish

"Keep the ROMANCE in MARRIAGE"

BEATRICE FAIRFAX

advises the women of VICTORIA

HOW to hold a man's love? That question is asked me oftener than any other except how to gain a man's love.

The answer to both is the same—make him feel how feminine you are!

Many women know that clothes can play a tremendous part in expressing feminine charm.

Wearing pretty, feminine things has an enormous effect on your own personality. You feel more feminine, more charming, and therefore you are charming.

The clothes that don't show are just as important as the ones that do. Exquisitely tinted lingerie makes you feel almost fifty times as dainty and feminine as when you have on plain or faded underthings.

Now, that psychological difference is highly contagious—men and women both sense it, and very quickly.

A Sure Way

So quickly, so surely, that women who are wise in the ways of attraction are careful to invest money in the silky, lacy things that make them feel, and therefore appear more intensely feminine.

They know that they can take such simple, economical care of these engaging garments with Lux that the psychological advantage of lovely lingerie is within the means of everyone.

The most fragile silks and laces will last and last, the most delicate and enchanting colours stay fresh and thrilling if you always wash them with Lux.

Keep Your Home Charming, Too

It is important, too, that your home should always seem dainty and charming to your husband. Keep the glamour of lovely fresh colour, not only in your house frocks, blouses, scarfs, handkerchiefs, but in everything about the house, for men love cheerful colour. Curtains, linens, spreads, cushion covers, all retain colour-charm with Lux.

Lux Soap is made by the Lux Soap Co., Ltd., London, England.

(Above) Washed 12 times in Lux, silk and lace fabrics intact, colour lovely as new. You feel and are charming when your lingerie is so exquisite.

Hardware and department stores are featuring this plan this year. One of the beauties of the scheme is that it does not load up the bride with a lot of useless articles for her kitchen. The color scheme which she decides upon can be carried out in her electric or gas range and in the selection of her linoleum, curtains and other kitchen decorations. The cost of the colored enameled ware is only a trifle more than the more sober colored enameled ware that has been used in Canadian homes for generations.

Ask No Questions!

SYNOPSIS
Annexa West, against the advice of John Diamond, owner of a New York newspaper, and Alva Cropper, managing editor, leaves a deserted country place known as Bride's House, in Connecticut, to visit her mother, who has died there mysteriously. Another, a bride, strangely disappears. The issue which Annexa persists in asking questions brings no matter what happens the tenant must ask no questions. Annexa moves in, and finds that a grave in the private burial ground on the property has been newly opened. Otto, a victim of strange fears, gives notice that he is leaving. He says someone has been riding Dracula, a savage stallion, at night. Annexa finds Otto in the barn, murdered. And close beside him is a coffin containing a wedding dress and other bridal finery. The sheriff finds no coffin in the barn. Furthermore, the open grave has been neatly filled in by unknown hands. Diamond renews his refusal. Derick Cropper, one time a circus athlete, now a country house doctor, who was an admirer of James Runnels, first tenant of Bride's House, calls to take care of one of Annexa's polo ponies.

CHAPTER VII

The deputy left by Seth Tobey to guard the house had had his dinner and was established in the most comfortable chair in the living-room when Miss West appeared. He seemed disposed to entertain her with confidences concerning the incompetence of certain local Crossing officials, she felt to the sanctuary of the back kitchen.

At ten o'clock Abby fixed a pot of coffee and some sandwiches for their protector. When the repast had been set before him the two women announced that they were about to retire to the floor above. "Make yourself at home," urged Miss West with doubtful hospitality. "All I hope is that you won't be needed in your official capacity." The man had a gun, not the automatic of fiction, but a riot gun; his trigger cocked, ready for emergency. "You go to sleep, miss, and don't be a scared of nuthin'. I promise to shoot at the first sound of a foot stirrin'. And I allow shoots to kill."

"Better wait for the second sound," she advised. "This is no ordinary man hunt were embarked upon. Your bullet might go clean through the thing you're aiming at and hit the wrong person. A ghost is so porous, you know."

She moved toward the door, closely followed by Abby. "If you want anything, there's the bell pull. It rings in the upper hall. And, oh, by the way, should you feel you have to shoot, don't point that cannon of yours up in the air. I sleep right over your head."

When Miss West said sleep, she was taking liberties with the word. It was almost forty-eight hours now since her eyelids had closed for any appreciable length of time. The habit of sleep had gone from them, and even with the comfortable assurance that an able-bodied man was seated in the room below—a man placed there on purpose to do the keeping awake for her—no amount of coaxing could woo it back.

Just as the combined weight of sleeplessness and darkness had grown almost too heavy to be borne, the tired body relaxed. Eyelashes quivered, drooped, quivered again, settled into place. For five minutes, ten, twenty, sleep gave temporary relief to the exhausted brain. But before the sleep had become deep enough to do any good a violent commotion of the muscles almost lifted her from the bed, and there she was awake once more—awake and trembling. Had something moved in the room? Had a hand touched her face? She flung the bedclothes from her and sat up. In her search for matches and a candle, a tumbler of water got tipped over and wet her to the skin. But no one seemed to hear the racket she made opening bureau drawers in search for another nightdress. And this was doubly strange when one came to remember the man in the room below.

Shivering, she blew out the candle and, place it on the stand between the two windows, where it would be within reach of her hand. As she turned to crawl back into bed, the cloud bank which had brought the darkness slid away, and the south pasture lay revealed. On the knoll near the graveyard willows stood Dracula, head up, tail switching gently back and forth—a sure sign something more than ordinary had occurred to arouse his temper.

Miss West began to ask herself what the stallion was doing there out of his box stall, free and foot-loose. Her answer was not long in coming. From the side door of the red barn emerged a man—a tall, broad-shouldered fellow, as physically potent as the horse he so obviously meant to master. Otto's night rider. Striding a pair of field glasses from the drawer of the night stand, the girl took a good look at the approaching figure.

The stranger smiled that the man was young, that he was dressed in khaki trousers and a torn flannel shirt, and that he was handsome. Though how she knew this last it would have been difficult to say—the top of a dark curly head being all that was available for inspection. Over his right arm hung a bridle as one would use for a turn around the park—an ornamental affair, fit only for a city-crie nag.

The daughter of Cyrus West tried to be angry and only succeeded in growing breathless. Her heart leaped now as she watched the cool unhesitating way in which the stranger rode down upon the raging Dracula. This man was familiar with horses. He knew how to handle the stallion, had dismounted all those warning puffs and ten paces from the knoll the man snorted.

At a distance of some eight or stopped, and with every appearance of leasurlessness searched among a clump of young plum trees. A young man, looking one to his liking, he proceeded to cut himself a switch, lopping off the leaves with the point of a long wicked-looking knife. The horse, meanwhile, one eye aware of everything that was going on, snatched a bit of clover.

The man kept advancing, his hands raised above his head, the bridle held out suggestively between them. What the killer thought was not difficult to imagine. He laid small ears close to his head and curled a vicious lip. Annexa West's faith in the newcomer's ability waned away. A great horror, the certainty that Otto had indeed been trampled under those dancing hoofs, and that she was about to see his fate re-enacted here before her eyes, brought her to her knees in front of the open window.

"Stop!" she cried. But even had the cry been heard, it was too late. The stranger had already made his spring for a place on the bare, black back of the horse.

What followed in the next few seconds was too kaleidoscopic to describe in detail. A whirling picture of man and beast—of pounding hoofs and flying mane—of a plum tree switch—of that pale eye of the killer's flashing in the moonlight.

The horse had reared on his haunches and was pawing the air, preparing to fling himself backward a suicidal attempt to be rid of his detestable burden. A well-timed cut across the nose brought him to earth again.

Cunningly changing his tactics, Dracula began a series of leaps, each ending on four stiff legs. To the last leap was added a frantic spin from which both horse and rider emerged dizzily wondering what the next move would be.

It was at this moment that the watcher in the window heard a sound in the room below—the scrap of a chair as though someone had risen hurriedly, followed immediately by the squeak of a heavy tread over the two loose boards near the fireplace. Too often had Annexa stepped on those boards herself not to recognize their dolorous plaint.

Without doubt the stranger had caught a hint of what was going on and had risen to attend to it. And then the thought: suppose he snatched the gun from the night rider's pocket and was going to take a pot shot at the night rider? She called:

"You in the south pasture—look out! Man coming! Gun!" The stranger flung a look over his left shoulder, a wordless, fleeting question.

The big black horse, quick to feel, sensitive to understand and interpret, did not have to be told that his rider's attention had been momentarily distracted. All he needed was an opening, and this was it. In a flash he had the bit between his teeth, had whirled about and was headed for the stone wall.

Too late, Miss West saw what she had done. Helpless she could only grind her finger nails into the wood of the window sill and wait, an unwilling witness, while the stranger had sought to save from the deputy's gun was carried to what looked like certain destruction.

As for the rider, not until he was within a stride of the wall did he snap out of the trance into which her inopportune cry of warning had plunged him. Even when he did come to it, it was with a lively appreciation of the danger that lay ahead. Digging his knees into the foam-spashed side of his horse, he brought all the power in the upper part of his body to bear on the frail curb bit.

Another leap and they had reached the stone barrier. There came one heart-rending second of indecision, one last quiver of opposition before the killer, unable to escape his heritage of obedience, rose in response to that mighty upward tug, skimmed the wall like a swallow in midflight, and flattening out on the roof beyond disappeared in a welter of rage and gravel.

Miss West hung limp across the window sill till the last hoof beat had been lost in the leafy stillness of the Wood Road. Gradually her lips parted in a smile. Had her heart not already been given to another, here, right at hand, were all the qualifications she had dreamed of as being necessary for romance. Youth, physical attractiveness, daring. She checked them off, one by one, on her fingers, adding, "Mystery." Which last brought the disturbing thought, "what was a man like this doing, skulking about the barns of Bride's House in clothing that would have shamed the average tramp?"

A bell tinkling sharply in the hall outside brought her back to her surroundings with a start—an agitated tinkle re-creating the atmosphere of dread that seemed to much a part of the old Runnels place. She rose, still under the thrall of what she had just witnessed, and moved toward the door. But before she had taken a dozen steps thunderous detonations shook the flooring under her feet.

A shot, exaggerated a hundred times because it had been fired indoors. And almost instantly there came another sound, a sound whose significance her mind did not grasp until minutes later—she muffled the roar of a high-powered automobile engine getting under way.

In the suffocating silence which followed, loosened plaster cracked from the walls. Behind her, a picture fell, scattering broken glass. The deputy had fired. Had he killed anything? And if so—what? Thanks to her warning, Dracula and his rider had got clean away. But perhaps the ghost had been less fortunate. The nameless, formless shadow she had seen in the moment or two after Otto had left her the night before—could it have become material enough to be caught napping?

"I'm awake." This to Abby who was pounding on the door. "What's happened?" "For the love of God, Miss Ann, let me in!" and the faithful old servant stumbled into the room, a candle dripping hot wax, unheeded, over bare neck and bosom. For a moment the two women stood and stared at each other, stared like strangers. "If you don't say something soon, Ann said at last, 'I will go and see for myself.' At that Abby began to scream. "Don't go down. Stay where you are. We may be the next."

"Tell me what's happened!" There was that in the girl's tone which brought the fear-maddened Scotchwoman to her senses. "The watchman, Miss Ann. Oh, the poor creature!" "Yes, yes! Go on!" "Someone's shot him—shot him with his own gun!" Mechanically, Annexa West took the candle from Miss Barth's hand. "Stand aside," she said. "I must see if there is anything I can do for him."

The Charm of Japanese Prints

By MARGARET C. MACLURE

Much has been said and written about Japanese paintings and drawings ever since they first became known to the Western world, and few realized when Japanese color prints were first exhibited in Europe how far-reaching their influence was to become. Time, instead of diminishing their charm, has only seemed to heighten it.

Lafadio Hearn in one of his letters from Japan, said that he only wished he could be reincarnated in some little Japanese baby so that he could see and feel the world as beautifully as a Japanese brain does. The same letter, speaking of Japanese art, he says: "I believe that their art is as far in advance of our art as the old Greek art was superior to that of the earliest European art groups."

To appreciate fully the subtle beauties of Japanese art, it would be necessary to study a variety of things, and in this matter many a

When you come to think of it, it is really marvelous the way light and shade coloring and values can be expressed by a Japanese artist in just a few strokes. A river, for instance, is sometimes delineated by perhaps a single stroke, a village by two or three roof ridges emerging from the mist; the sea by the curves of a few wave crests. There is also a certain bold brush work which expresses texture, strength and movement all combined. In order to truly understand Japanese painting one must be able to appreciate one's brush work, but the Japanese method of wielding the brush, as is well known, is very different from our own, and presents many difficulties to foreigners. Helen Hyde, a brilliant young American artist, went to Japan and stayed there for two years before she mastered this phase of the art.

A large space on his paper or silk is always left untouched by the Japanese artist. This part, though blank, has its own mission to fulfill, either to intensify the subject or to give a breadth and depth to the picture. As an example of this, the Emperor Mikumaro was anxious to replace a plum tree which had died in his garden with a suitable one. It so happened that a plum tree in the garden of one Ki-no Tsurayuki met with the approval of the emperor. When the tree was transplanted, Ki-no Tsurayuki's daughter composed a little ode, which, when roughly translated into English, reads like this—"Since it is the emperor's command, I obey with utmost joy; but what shall I answer when the little bush warbler returns and asks for his old home?" The emperor was so touched when he read this slip of paper attached to the plum tree that he immediately gave orders that the tree should be restored to the original garden.

AN OBJECT LESSON
Another very charming print, of which the artist's name, for the moment, escapes me, depicts an incident in the early life of Mencius, the great Chinese teacher. When a boy, he took a great dislike to learning and refused to continue at school. Thereupon his mother, who was weaving at the time, cut the hem of her robe from the loom with a large knife, impressing on the boy that his discontinuance of learning amounted to the same thing as rending him useless for any of the great possibilities of life.

One might go on quoting endless examples such as these. There are hundreds and hundreds of prints depicting some quaint fable, legend, or poetic sentiment.

Even an Author

Has His Troubles

MONTREAL, June 6.—"Even an author has his troubles. It's an awful trade. I mean it," said Mr. Rudyard Kipling in a farewell message to the writers and authors of Canada before leaving Montreal for England on St. Duchess of Bedford yesterday. "What them good luck for me," he added, and asked in his quick, impetuous way, "How many of them are there?"

When told that two hundred and fifty delegates of the Canadian Authors' Association from all parts of Canada would gather here in convention from June 25 to 27, he said he was surprised to learn that the number of representatives was so large.

Work and play are wonderful tonics separately, but they usually make a very bad mixture.

Danny Has a Fight

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

He he wrong or he he right, The coward runs; he will not fight. —Danny Meadow Mouse.

Danny Meadow Mouse had gone right past the old tin can in which his mother had hidden his escape from Flip the Terrier. You see, Danny didn't know she was there. He was in a hurry, was Danny. Those little legs of his were moving very fast for such a little fellow.

"Oh dear!" said Danny. "I haven't the least idea where Nanny has gone. I do hope that dog didn't get her. I don't think he did, but he must have given her a terrible fright. There is no knowing where she has gone. If only there were some nice little runways all out, I would know better where to go. Ah, here is a little path! Some other mouse must have made it. Perhaps Nanny found this."

It was easier going in this little path, and Danny snuggled along thinking of nothing but catching up with Nanny. He didn't even think of danger to himself. He wanted Nanny, and Nanny was all he could think about.

Danny traveled until he grew tired. Then he found a tusock of grass. There was new grass, and there was also a lot of old grass, which was more or less matted down. Under this was a good hiding place and there Danny took a long rest. It was dusk when finally Danny started on again. He didn't know where he was going. He wanted to find Nanny, but he had no idea where to look for her. So he began to wander about aimlessly. Now and then he stopped for a bite to eat. Somehow, Danny felt as though he never had felt in his life. He was wandering along a little path made long before by some other Meadow Mouse. Presently he came to a place where another path joined this one. Just as he reached it he heard a little sound and he looked up this little path to see a small person that at first glance he thought was a young Mole. He was going to pass without so much as saying "How do you do" when this little stranger made a sudden rush at him, fairly knocking Danny off his feet. Now Danny Meadow Mouse is a chunky little fellow and when he is to fight is a very good fighter. This stranger was smaller than Danny and Danny hadn't the least doubt that he would soon make this stranger take to his heels.

Following the meeting, Premier Mackenzie King said that no ministerial appointments had been made. It is understood that there will be a further meeting of the Cabinet on Monday.

GAIN MADE IN POPULATION OF THIS DOMINION

TORONTO, June 7.—The Toronto Globe today published the following dispatch from its Ottawa correspondent: "The population of Canada is officially estimated at 9,796,800, an increase of more than 1,000,000 since the last census in 1921 when the population was officially placed at 8,788,000."

Since the last census there were 2,172,622 births up to December 31, 1929, and 928,866 deaths. The natural increase, therefore, was 1,243,756. Immigrants totaled 1,130,650 since 1921, and the total population would have been 11,152,455 at the present time, but the Dominion lost 1,550,655 persons during the nine-year period, either to the United States, Great Britain or other countries. Many immigrants went home again.

Homes of Beauty & Comfort

Window Space Is Chief Feature of Terrytown House

Larger Window Space Contributes to Increased Daylight and Fresh Air—Illustrated Example of Architecture Has Developed This Idea, Making Distinctive Type of Homestead

Living-Rooms Designed to Give Maximum Comfort

ONE of the modern tendencies of building construction is the increase in the number of windows and the size of the window openings. Whereas the old-time houses were constructed largely with single units of sash and few openings to a room, the modern dwelling is characterized by spacious window areas which let in a flood of daylight and fresh air. That this type of construction is beneficial to the health of the occupant and at the same time striking in its architectural balance effectively against the wall masses and create a new atmosphere that is distinctive and unique.

TERRYTOWN AN EXAMPLE
The Terrytown which is illustrated in adjacent columns is an example of this modern tendency to build homes that are filled with sunshine and fresh air. Across the front on either side of the gabled vestibule are large masses of windows of the casement type. The opening to the right is filled with four units of sash, while that at the left of the den contains a group of three units of casements.

Each of the rooms of the house are generously provided with window openings, double hung sliding sash being used in these windows in the side and rear elevations.

The large number of window openings is one factor in making the Terrytown a distinctive home. The effective combination of single and double hung sliding sash also brings a note of the unusual, while the irregular roof lines, with their gables, hip roof and eyebrow window, aid in creating values.

The broad front door of this modern home is flanked on each side by twin electric lights. The fanlight above gives an arch-like effect to the entrance.

A stoop is used for the front entrance, a concrete slab being a few steps above the sidewalk level.

CONTAINS A DEN
Passing through the vestibule, the living-room, which is nineteen feet three inches long by fourteen feet wide, reveals itself. This attractive room is well lighted by windows at each side.

Separated by a plaster arch is the den, a cozy little room, well lighted by five windows. It may be used as a solarium, a radio-room, or a library.

Immediately to the rear of the den, separated by French doors, is the dining-room, eleven feet three inches by thirteen feet three inches in dimensions. Cross ventilation and several windows make this a pleasant room.

SERVICE ROOMS
The kitchen, breakfast nook and service entry are located at the rear of the living-room. These are reached through a door off the centre hall.

The kitchen is long and narrow, well equipped with pantry cases and lighted by a number of windows. At one end is the stove while the refrigerator is located near the service entry.

A door off the service entry leads to the basement stairs, while from this point also is the service door outside.

TWO CHAMBERS
On the upper floor are found two chambers, each with cross ventilation. The master's chamber is constructed with two closets, each of which are lighted by electricity. At the side is a chamber, twelve feet nine inches square. While slightly smaller than the master's chamber, it has the advantage of being lighted on three sides by windows.

The bathroom is situated in the rear of the house off the upstairs hall, and is a compact little room with a built-in tub, a metal medicine cabinet and a linen closet.

Another linen closet is found off the hall, thus giving the housewife ample storage space for bed linens, towels and the like. Closet space is always desirable in a house, and the Terrytown has it in abundance.

BASEMENT LAYOUT
The basement is reached from the service entry. It is fully excavated and the floor has been concreted. The laundry-room has been partitioned off from the rest of the space by a concrete wall. This enables the clothes to be laundered under ideal conditions, for no ash or coal dust can penetrate into the laundry. The drying-room is in another part of the basement.

The Terrytown may be heated by hot air furnace, or if the family prefer hot water heat, this type of plant may be easily installed. Space has been set aside for a fuel bin, although if the house be equipped with an oil heater, the space may be used for a workroom.

Little Mary was on a visit to her grandparents and the old-fashioned grandfather clock in the hall was a source of wonderment to her. While she was standing before it her grandmother said to her from the next room: "Is the clock running, dear?"

"No, ma'am," promptly replied Mary. "It's just standing still and wagging its tail."

FIRST BRITISH GIRL WED AT NOTRE DAME

LONDON, June 7.—Talks of peace between the statesmen of different countries may go on forever, but the diplomacy is that of our young "ambassadors."

One of the most important ones of the moment is Miss Anne Tyrrell, daughter of Lord Tyrrell, ambassador in Paris, who at the end of April married one of the secretaries at the embassy, Mr. Adrian Holman.

The fact that she is the first British woman to be married at the Cathedral of Notre Dame since the time of Mary Stuart, consort of the Dauphin, is an indication of the popularity and influence of the Tyrrell family in French Catholic circles.

Miss Tyrrell has inherited diplomacy. Apart from the official side of her career in Paris she has become endeared to the ladies of the other ambassadors, and this is so in a marked degree in the case of Mrs. Edge, wife of the American Ambassador, who arrived in Paris a few weeks ago.

The little daughter and son of America's representative acted as attendants to the bride.

LIGHT SWITCHES SHOULD BE PLACED CONVENIENTLY

Properly placed switches in the home add that final touch of real convenience to the electric installation. Dark halls and stairways lose their terrors and inconvenience if electric switches are placed at hand so that you may "light your way."

Lumber switches provide a most efficient medium of electrical control. A touch of the finger up or down, and the lights are on or off at will. Luminous indicators on the switch levers aid in locating the switch at night. In planning your home see to it that adequate provision is made in the wiring plans for the convenient placing of all switches.

Johnny: "And there, son, you have the story of your dad and the Great War."
Son: "Yes, dad; but why did they need all the other soldiers?"

The Teacher—And now are there any questions you would like to ask?

Little Robb—Yes, please. I think John's wife fell for that fish story when she got home.

Dairy Products Report Shows Plant Expansion

Dairy Commissioner Points Out What Progress Has Been Made in Province—Deals With Safeguarding of Milk Supply

Owing to retarded pasturage in the Spring of last year and the drought of the late Summer and Fall no appreciable increase in the total of creamery butter, manufactured in the province, is presented in the report of the dairy commissioner of the Department of Agriculture for the year 1929 as submitted to Hon. William Aikinson. Other considerations are presented in the report, an extract from which says:

"Due to increasing demands of the other branches of dairy work, the normal rate of increase is apparently lessening. Stated in other words, the requirements for condensers, ice cream plants and fluid supplies for human consumption are growing more rapidly than the dairy industry as a whole. Inasmuch as the industry in general continues to make progress, the development of these more remunerative channels is to be regarded as satisfactory. But, from outside sources may be used with no misgivings if replacing butterfat sold through more profitable outlets and providing our development of new dairy areas steadily proceeds."

Manufacturing plants in operation during 1929 are shown in the report to be thirty-one butter factories, two cheese factories, two condensers, one powdered milk factory, forty-four ice cream plants and several farm cheese establishments.

MILK SUPPLY

Reviewing the work of the inspectors attached to the dairy branch the dairy commissioner states:

"To check closely the work done by the licensed cream graders and by the licensed milk and cream testers, accordingly, constitutes a large portion of the duties of the inspectors. Calls on very neglectful patrons are also made. Factory buildings, equipment, storages, drainage systems are scrutinized as to sanitation and general cleanliness."

"A number of applicants were examined for milk testers' licenses during the year."

"Much time was taken up at Vancouver and New Westminster fairs with the dairy exhibits, and help was also given with the all-

Canada butter competition, at the time of the Western Canada dairy convention in Vancouver last February.

"It may justly be claimed that the sanitary conditions prevailing at the creameries of the province are good. A better appreciation exists today than heretofore of the need for absolute cleanliness (in the bacteriological sense) of all equipment coming into contact with the demands of the manufacturer."

COW TESTING

Under the heading of "Herd Improvement" the report shows that 430 farmers are directly interested in the work of the cow-testing associations in which approximately 6,000 cows are under test. The contribution of the department to this work consists in supplying all books and stationery required together with a grant towards the salary of each cow tester. Further provision is made for a supervisor to maintain uniformity in the operations of the associations.

"There has not been on the part of members of these associations a realization that co-operative effort to ascertain and preserve, for the common good, proven sires must be resorted to for continued and systematic progress in herd results," the dairy commissioner comments. This he accounts for in part by the diversity of breeds.

Speaking of the benefits derived from cow-testing associations in the matter of marketing dairy animals the report says: "In the event of a dairyman wishing to sell some or all of his cows he can obtain a very much higher price for them if they have certificates of production."

Participation in fair exhibits is described as quite unsatisfactory owing to the space allotted at two of the three major fairs, the commissioner suggests, but states that the number of exhibits is exceedingly good, in spite of such unfavorable conditions.
